The Feeling Among the Soldiers.

There was a little gathering of soldiers and sailors of the Union in St. Louis the other day to select Missouri's representatives in the great gathering at Pittsburgh next week. Two or three eloquent speeches were made at that re-union of tried and true friends, who were comrades in war, and today stand unflinchingly together by the old flag. Not least impressive was that of Col. S. S. Burdett, who in the course of his address, said: "The most unmanly thing that I have noted in all this campaign of unmanliness, is the attempt on the part of our adversaries to make an evil where there is none; to revive the memories that are dead; thus to tear open the wound long since healed, that they may try their quack plasters on it. Why, fellow-citizens, it has been three years—yes, it has been four years since the anger which sometimes welled in the heart at the bitterness which gathered in the spirit at the memory of the desolated hearth-stones has passed away in the sunshine of peace. There is today nowhere in this broad land a remnant, a reminder, that there dwelleth any where between the oceans aught but brotherhood, save when, as you find it in the fanaticism of these fellows who never saw a chasm, but desire to cross one now. This gathering, simply to revive the old social feelings, is as good an answer as can be given to the false shout attempted to be raised upon us. I have never been disposed to man worship, and so I have never been a worshiper of U. S. Grant; but I have endeavored by the association and intercourse which I have had with him during the last four years to reckon up the man and see what he is. History has not made up her verdict, it is true, and years will roll past before the time shall come when the record of U. S. Grant shall be made up; but so far as his record has been made, so far as facts done and accomplished can testify, I stand here to-night and say there is not upon the earth a record of a civic kind so grand as that which doubly adorns the head of U. S. Grant."

Prosperity of the Country.

In his address at the reunion of Missouri soldiers and sailors, Col. S. S. Burdett said: "It was said by Junius, in one of his celebrated letters, that the condition of a people is the testimony out of which shall come the verdict as to the wisdom of the ruler. Look about you in pride, and where will you find in all history a nation that has prospered so grandly as ours since we called Gen. Grant our President? Population has swept onward in its increase, material wealth has been gathered within the last ten years, and notably within the last four, until we can say of that increase that it is larger than all the increases aggregated since the day the Mayflower landed at Plymouth Rock. This is the testimony which your public record, which your talisman of the census gives you as the result of Republican rule, and notably that of the Soldier President. Look at our own State, my fellow-citizens. Within the last decade we have been war-ridden; not famine, not pestilence, have desolated our shores, but all over our frontier plains the chimney has stood alone as a monument that a habitation once was there. Not till 1867 did we gather our energies to encounter the advance of the age in which we lived. Yet our resources, with less than six years to go on, have more than doubled, I believe almost trebled, the increase during that most delectable decade between 1850 and 1860, when nought but Democracy reigned in your midst. [Applause.] We saw grand resources which lay dormant until Republican hands were laid upon them. When the Republican government got into power these resources were utilized, and the results not only astonished yourselves but the whole world, until the gold in the coffers of all nations jingles at the prospect of investment in Missouri mines, and that in ours. We raised the standard of welcome, which brought to our State within six years over 800,000 hands to toil with us. It was our party that inaugurated the policy which gave assurance that whoever came to Missouri should have a fair chance in the struggle for life."

The Chicago Times Indorses the Louisville Nominees.

The Chicago Times, the leading Democratic paper of the interior, says: "By the nomination of Charles O'Conor and John Quincy Adams for President and Vice-President, the Democratic Convention at Louisville has exhibited wisdom and patriotism far beyond public expectation. Moreover, in its final action that Convention rescued its action from what would have been the greatest mistake. * * * This result of a political movement which has been studiously and persistently belied and belittled by trading office-seekers and their organs of the Press, will be received by the whole country with surprise. To Democrats whose paramount desire is to promote the cause of Democratic principles, the surprise will be an agreeable one; to men of anti-democratic principles, or those who are willing to sacrifice the greatest good of the country for the greatest personal gain, it will be a disagreeable one. For it is a rebuke of political traders and conspirators to get office which can neither be ignored nor slandered away. And it is a reassertion of true and pure democratic purposes which appeals in no sinister voice to the convictions of every honest Democrat." The Times believes, "with the force of irresistible conviction, that Democratic principles are the only salvation of liberty. To the realization of this desire, which the Times believes is felt by all who are really Democrats, the new movement—based as it is upon the unquestionable Democratic principles enunciated in Mr. O'Conor's letter—offers the most promising available means at the present time. For it presents at once the only declaration of truly Democratic principles, and the only candidate who as sincerely and honestly in accord with them."

What Horace Greeley "Knows About" Gen. Dix and his Famous Order.

A paragraph from "The American Conflict: A History of the Great Rebellion in the United States of America, 1850-64," by Horace Greeley, reads: "The revenue cutter Case, stationed at Mobile, was turned over by Capt. J. J. Morrison to the authorities of Alabama, at the end of January. The McClellan, Capt. Breshwood, stationed on the Mississippi, below New-Orleans, was, in like manner, handed over to those of Louisiana. Gen. Dix had sent down a special agent to secure them, but he was too late. The telegraph dispatch whereby Gen. Dix directed him, 'If any person attempts to haul down the American flag, shoot him on the spot,' sent an electric thrill through the loyal heart of the country."—From page 413, Volume 1, of the American Conflict, by Horace Greeley.

Nothing if not Factious.

In his Recollections of a Busy Life Mr. Greeley refers to the renomination of Mr. Lincoln as follows: "Though I very heartily supported it when made, I did not favor his renomination as President, for (not that I was in favor of the one-term principle as the panacea for all our woes, but) I wanted the war driven onward with vehemence, and this was not in his nature."

Greeley's Opinion of His Candidate for Congressman at Large.

"Sunset Cox, who has been called in to aid the sinking cause of the Democracy in New-York, was speaking in Ohio on the late Presidential canvass. He gloried in the name of Copperhead, and said it was a Copperhead that saved the nation of Israel in the wilderness—alluding to the lifting up of the brazen serpent in sight of the stricken people. A man shouted out in the crowd, 'Yes, but the Copperheads bit the nation, and no relief was gained till the chief Copperhead was strung up on a pole in sight of the camp.' The orator subsided."—Tribune, Nov. 3, 1865.

"Cox reminds us of the old Greek story of the donkey that devoured a rope of straw at one end while a foolish old woman twisted it industriously at the other. 'Is Cox like the donkey or the old woman?' some reader may ask. Whichever you please, O gentle inquirer! But whether he is asinine or anile, he is no better than a Disunionist of that worst of variety, which prattles upon Northern platforms instead of fighting on Southern fields. We confess that we do see how Cox differs from Jeff. Davis except that Davis is the cleverest man of the two; for we do not think that any one with the average modicum of brains would stultify himself and insult his hearers, through a whole evening, by alternately blowing hot and cold, by talking loyalty and treason in the same breath, or by seductively sighing for dear Virginia to come back, while he bid Massachusetts be off with herself instanter."—Tribune, Jan. 17, 1863.

The Vermont Victory—Bennington County.

Bennington County, Vermont, is the home of Mr. Gardner, late the Democratic candidate for Governor of the State, and was represented in the Senate at its last session by him and by Mr. Horrobin, who now heads the Democratic ticket for electors, and was also a candidate for re-election to the Senate. The county has been redeemed, and with truth the Rutland Herald can thus speak of it: "It was really 'reform' with her, and nobly has she reformed her representation in the Senate. Returns from every town in the county have been received, and show the election of the two Republican candidates to State Senate—Hon. Mason S. Colburn, by a majority of 1,055, and Hon. C. E. Houghton, by a majority of 1,036. Well done, Bennington County. The same county, which has furnished so many Governors to Vermont, seems also to have a choice as to the hand she furnishes, giving 936 majority against Gardner."

Sumner Again Reviewed by Garrison.

Mr. William Lloyd Garrison has written a review of Sumner's autobiographical sketch and compilation of slanders against Grant. He says, in conclusion: "The North, ever since the rebellion to this day, has been and will continue to be forbearing, magnanimous and nobly generous, desiring only (in the language of Mr. Sumner) that 'the equal rights of all should be placed under the safeguard of assured peace and reconciliation,' with none to molest or make afraid; but she must not and she cannot trust the destinies of the country at this hour in the hands of those who have perfidiously broken their oath-bound pledges, and upon whose professions no reliance can be placed, for the truth is not in them. They have been trained to make lies their refuge, and under falsehood do they still hide themselves. There is no freedom of speech or of the Press among them, no personal safety for loyal whites and blacks, except as the protecting arm of the General Government is over them. Let that be wholly withdrawn, as it will be in case of the election of Mr. Greeley, and bloody persecution and violence will quickly be the order of the day in all parts of the South. There is nothing in the state of the country or in the Administration of President Grant that calls for any change, and especially such a change! Of this Mr. Sumner shall be witness. His say is: Reconstruction is now complete. Every State is represented in the Senate, and every district is represented in the House of Representatives. Every Senator and every Representative is in his place. There are no vacant seats in either Chamber, and among the members are fellow-citizens of the African race. And amnesty nearly universal has been adopted.' All this is due to the Republican Party and the President of its choice, and what higher panegyric need be pronounced? But Mr. Sumner strangely adds: 'In this condition of things I find new reason for change!' Let him do so if he can; but the loyal governing men of the country will draw an opposite deduction, and govern themselves accordingly—remembering the epitaph of one equally as ill-judging as the Massachusetts Senator, 'I was well; I wished to be better; I took physic, and here I am!'"

A Card from Speaker Blaine.

To the Editor of the Kennebec Journal:

The sensational story in the Boston Herald of yesterday, in regard to my ownership in the Credit Mobilier of the Union Pacific Railroad Company, in connection with Secretary Boutwell, Senator Wilson and Messrs. Dawes, Bingham, Garfield and others of the House of Representatives, is a mere campaign canard, utterly baseless and groundless. I never owned a dollar in the Company in my life, either directly or indirectly, through myself or through another. I depart in this instance from my usual practice of suffering campaign slanders to pass without notice, because this particular falsehood is circumstantially narrated, and is, I understand, to be widely distributed over the Third District in order to influence the vote on Monday next.

SEPT. 5. JAMES G. BLAINE.

Democratic Despair.

The Brooklyn Argus speaks thus dolefully and despondently of its party's nominations for State officers: "We have no hurrah for these nominations—with the exception of Hon. S. S. Cox, whom a better man could not have been named, we believe the action of the Convention has been fatal to the prospects of the coalition in this Commonwealth. The reputation of Mr. Depew is so equivocal, and his connection with the last census so damnatory to his name—he has been so detested by Democrats, and is now so despised by his late political associates, that we cannot for our life imagine the possibility of his election. The nomination of Mr. Kernan is a graver blunder still, and proves conclusively the utter ignorance or indifference of the Convention as to the true cause of that weakness of the Democratic Party which deterred it from making its own nominations in this campaign. The cause, or causes rather, of that weakness have been often set forth in the Argus since the memorable 12th of July, 1871, and the Ring revelations immediately following, and, without restating those, we may be allowed the liberty to assert that the nomination of Mr. Kernan is worth 30,000 votes to Grant in the State of New-York alone. We shall not argue the matter—that would only impair our chances of success. We are content to give our opinion, based on sufficient data, and to state the expectation based on that opinion. Mr. Kernan is a respectable and accomplished man, but that fact will not elect him. He is something else which, just at this juncture, would be fatal to a better man still. We believe, nationally, in 'anything to beat Grant,' and in the State, anything to beat Dix. So we shall hoist the hateful name of Depew and the objectionable name of Kernan as our flag, vote for them and labor for their election till sundown of the 5th of November."

Grant and Wilson Club at Millbury, Mass.

A very enthusiastic gathering of Grant and Wilson advocates occurred on Saturday at Millbury, Worcester County, Mass., the occasion being the raising of a campaign banner. The Providence and Worcester Railroad ran extra trains to accommodate the multitude, and the mills having stopped, the utmost enthusiasm prevailed.

After the raising of the flag Col. J. A. Titus, of Worcester, Hon. George B. Loring, Hon. Geo. F. Hoar, and F. P. Goulding, Esq., of Worcester, delivered addresses. Strong assurances were given of the safety of Millbury's support of Grant and Wilson. Remarks from the President of the Club, Col. Peter Simpson, Jr., closed doubtless the most enthusiastic meeting yet held in Worcester County.

Notes from the Political Head-Quarters.

The Sabbath was marked yesterday by a suspension of business at the various political head-quarters. The rooms of the Republican National Committee were closed. The Republican State Committee rooms were open, but no business was transacted. Hon. Wm. E. Chandler, Secretary of the National Committee, is expected in town today.

Ethan Allan, Chairman of the Liberal Republican National Committee, having returned from Syracuse, has again taken command of affairs at the Glenham Hotel head-quarters. A notice has been issued at the head-quarters, stating that all communications relative to State politics are to be "referred" to John Cochrane, Astor House.

Augustus Schell and Secretary Bird are now in daily attendance at the Democratic Committee rooms, Springler House.

Mr. Greeley gives an agricultural address in Vermont on Tuesday next.

A large number of appointments of speakers for Massachusetts meetings throughout the State have been made by the Republican State Committee, and the Liberal Republican State Committee.

Horace F. Clark has been selected President of the Tammany Greeley and Brown ratification meeting on the 12th inst. John McCool will lead the list of Vice-Presidents.

The excursion to Nyack to hear Senator Conkling speak on the same date, and the first of the series of Republican mass-meetings at Cooper Union, under the auspices of the State Committee, are two local political events much talked of at present.

Miscellaneous Notes.

We are informed that the Republicans of the First District of Queens County, have not yet made any nomination for the Assembly....Many of the Greeleyites of Louisiana are dissatisfied with the late "compromise" on State officers, and they want still another convention to nominate candidates....The Greeley candidate for Congress in the Seventeenth District of Illinois said six weeks ago that he "wanted to see Jeff. Davis back in the United States Senate"....The Democrats of the Second District of West Virginia are determined to vote for Congressman in October and have nominated B. Frank Martin. This is, by the way, a sad defeat to Hon. C. J. Faulkner....The Buffalo Commercial Advertiser says that Hon. William G. Fargo of that city is not recognized as a very ardent Greeley man....The Cleveland Leader asserts that the Democratic Committee of that Congressional District offered $500 to a Republican who makes Grant speeches if he would advocate Chamberlain instead of Parsons for Congress....Ambrose L. Van Dusen has been nominated for re-election to the Assembly by the Republicans of the First District of Ontario County....The Democrats of the Seventh District of Virginia have nominated Judge John F. Harris for Congress. This leaves Col. E. T. W. Duke out in the cold, he, through consolation, being now a resident of the same district and an aspirant for the nomination....Senators Wilson and Lot M. Morrill and Speaker Blaine will speak in New Jersey before the election....The Republican Conventions in the first three Congressional Districts of Illinois are to be held Sept. 24....Lt. B. Bickey announces that he is an independent Republican candidate for Congress in the Fourth District of Virginia. He is the third, and there is a probability of another.

Lambert and Col. Wm. Peebles, of New-York Sand by Mr. J. P. Sampson, (colored,) of North Carolina. Several Democrats came forward, and declared they would vote for Grant and Wilson.

A grand mass-meeting will be held at an early day, under the direction of the Council of Political Reform, when the programme for the approaching election will be discussed. Some of the best men of the City have charge of this movement. The preparations for the meeting are far advanced, and the details will be announced in a few days. The best speakers have been engaged for the occasion. The feature of this demonstration is to develop the entire Reform strength of the City.

A meeting of the soldiers and sailors of the Twenty-first Assembly District was held at the Republican Head-quarters, No. 2,813 Third-avenue, on Friday evening, at which a large accession of members was made. Garnet, Prof. G. W. Clark, T. S. W. Titus.

Pursuant to the call of a committee, the voters of the Twentieth Ward assembled at No. 328 West Twenty-ninth-street, Friday evening, and amid much enthusiasm organized the Twentieth Ward Augustus T. Bishop Republican Association, and adopted as a motto, "Grant, Wilson, Dix and victory." After addresses in indorsement of the several candidates, the meeting adjourned. The following officers were elected: President, Thos. J. Griffin; First Vice-President, Thos. O. Boudder; Secretaries, Samuel M. Blake, J. H. Garrison; Treasurer, Geo. Smith. Upward of 200 members were enrolled.

THE EVE OF BATTLE.

Closing Demonstrations of the Campaign in Maine.

The Republicans Resolved to Achieve a Victory.

Enthusiastic Reception of Mr. Blaine at Augusta.

Rally at Portland---Saturday Night's Events Throughout the State.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

AUGUSTA, Me., Sept. 8.—The canvass closed in the State last night, with a grand series of meetings in all the principal cities of the State. Douglass spoke in Biddeford, John L. Swift and Gov. Washburn in Portland, Congressman Frye, in Lewiston, where there was a grand demonstration by torch-light and otherwise, Gen. Hawley in Bath, Gen. Harlan in Belfast, Speaker Blaine at North Vassalboro, Judge Russel at Skowhegan, Gen. Butler at Bucksport, in the afternoon, and at Bangor in the evening, Judge Bingham at Calais, Secretary Robeson at Dover, and Postmaster-General Creswell in Aroostook County, with local meetings and speakers too numerous to mention. The courageous and enthusiastic spirit of the Republicans was kept up to the very last moment. The meetings were all well attended, and the determination to win a victory to-morrow that shall resound through the length and breadth of the land was unalterable.

From every point, save one, comes good tidings. Bangor alone promises to disappoint just expectations. The liquor question has been pushed there to an extreme, and in such a manner as to arouse all the prejudices of the people. There is hope, however, that at last it has been overdone, as a severe revulsion was caused yesterday by the outrageous action of one of the Democratic candidates for the Legislature, who, to make sentiment against Gov. Perham and the Republicans, "put up" a shameful "job" on N. S. Harlow, a prominent druggist of that city, of whom he bought a prescription of gin for the asthma, and then complained of him, and had him fined $30 and costs. For this Strickland, the candidate, was severely denounced even by members of his own party. Bangor ought to do much better than she promises to, but if she does not fulfill the expectations heretofore entertained, it will be because of the skillful manipulation of this silly cider issue. Last year Perham carried the city by 300. It is now sure for Hersey, the Republican candidate for Congress, if not for Perham.

In Portland the Republicans promise to hold their own gallantly, despite the embarrassment of the cider question. It is too near the election to make any estimates of the result either necessary or profitable. But it is simply truth to say that there is not a single competent judge on the Republican side who does not feel convinced that they will easily hold the majority of last year, and this, too, is the frank admission at this time of the more candid Democrats, while the greater number of Republicans confidently expect to increase the majority of last year twenty-five per cent. The soreheads alone insist that the sky is to fall, and that the coalition is to catch a lap full of larks to-morrow. They may possibly be correct, but if they are, then all the precedents, and prospects, and indications and labors which have foretold and insured Republican victories in former years will go for naught in this. Judged by these, the probability of a splendid success is almost a certainty.

Speaker Blaine had a magnificent reception last night in Vassalboro, the native town of his opponent for Congress. He rode up from this city, and three miles out of this city, and three miles out of the village he was met by a band and a cavalcade of citizens, who escorted him into the village, where he met and spoke to 1,500 people of this and the surrounding towns, who had come in to hear him, although it was an evening meeting. As the battalion of speakers leave the State to-morrow, they will be overhauled in Boston on Tuesday, and distributed along a grand chain of meetings to be held in and around that city on Tuesday night. Among those who will speak are Speaker Blaine and Judge Bingham, Gen. Harlan, Secretary Robeson, Gen. Butler, Senator Wilson, and others.

Everybody is praying for pleasant weather to-morrow. With that an extraordinarily full vote will be polled. There has been very warm, closing with heavy and violent thunder showers, doing some damage and littering badly with the telegraph wires. It is raining steadily to-night.

Butler at Bangor—Enthusiastic Closing Rally in Norombega Hall.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

BANGOR, Me., Sept. 8.—The Republicans closed the campaign in this city last evening with a rousing meeting in Norombega Hall, which called to mind the earnest meetings held there during the war. Every seat was taken, and every foot of standing room was contested inch by inch by an immense jam of people which extended into the vestibule and passage ways. The raised seats in the rear of the platform were reserved for the battalion of tanners, who provided for the meeting, made a torch-light procession through the principal streets of the city, many of the houses on which were brilliantly illuminated.

Shortly after the tanners had taken their seats, Gen. Butler, the speaker of the evening, entered the hall and was greeted by the tanners with three rousing cheers and a "B-u-t-l-e-r-r-r-r" which was taken up by the whole audience until old Norombega rung again. Gen. Butler spoke for nearly two hours and a half in his happiest vein, and was frequently interrupted by prolonged applause by the audience, who kept their places with unflagging interest and attention to the close. It was a fitting close to an exciting and earnest campaign, and the audience adjourned to meet at the polls on Monday morning, to show by a Vermont majority what the Republicans of Maine know about Greeley.

A Lively Meeting in Portland to Close the Campaign—Greeleyism Exposed.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

PORTLAND, Me., Sept. 8.—The Republicans of Portland held their grand closing rally on Saturday evening, at the City Hall. Notwithstanding that the soreheads and Democrats held their grand torch-light procession, calcium-light speech-making demonstration also on Saturday evening, with Gilmore's Band from Boston as a special attraction, the City Hall was filled with a large and enthusiastic audience. Hon. Nathan Webb, United States District-Attorney, presided. Gen. John L. Swift, of Boston, made one of his rousing and telling speeches, showing up the Democracy and Greeleyism in their true colors, eulogizing the Republican Party for its noble deeds, glorious record and unparalelled magnanimity to rebels, it being the exponent of the grandest civilization ever known among nations. Greeley was severely criticised as a tool in the hands of scheming Southern politicians. Grant was declared to be a great soldier and a noble leader. The highest demands of justice, civilization, and national and business prosperity would be best promoted by the re-election of Grant and the success of the Republican cause. In conclusion, he urged Maine to give 30,000 Republican majority. The speech abounded in capital anecdotes and sharp hits, in which Gen. Swift is unapproachable, and the enthusiasm was at times immense.

Col. W. O. Mafflt, of New-York, made the closing speech, in which he referred to this contest as the same old fight of the rebellion, only in a new shape, and urged Maine to achieve an overwhelming victory for Perham and Grant on Monday next.

The meeting closed with hearty cheers for the cause and candidates.

The Democracy held a pow-wow on Saturday night, with a band from Boston, fire-works, calcium lights, a torch-light procession with 263 torches only, and with old-line Democratic speeches by Hons. E. O. Perrin of New-York, Charles Levi Woodbury of Boston, Gen. S. J. Anderson, C. P. Kimball, the Democratic nominee for Governor, and others. It did not begin to come up to the Republican demonstration of a week ago last Tuesday.

The vote of Portland to-morrow will be close. The vote last year was 4,126; Republican majority, 262. In September, 1868, the vote was 5,236, the largest ever thrown. There are some 7,750 voters according to the Assessor's list, and some 350 have been added this week, making 8,100. The Republicans have 200 out of the 350 new voters.

A Great Open-Air Meeting in Calais—Mr. Bingham, of Ohio, Speaks—Desperation of Mr. Pike.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

CALAIS, Me., Sept. 8.—Hon. John A. Bingham, of Ohio, addressed an immense open-air meeting in this city last evening. The words of the eloquent statesman had an inspiring effect, and their power will be felt in the election on Monday. F. A. Pike made an opposition speech in St. Croix Hall to the smallest audience that has assembled during the campaign. The people of Calais preferred to listen to the eloquence of Bingham rather than to Pike's personalities. In Calais Mr. Pike will make a desperate fight. Perceiving that he is defeated in the district, his greatest effort will be to save his own city. He will, however, struggle with an impossibility.

Candidates and Statistics.

The election today in Maine is for Governor, (the only State officer elected by direct vote of the people,) five Congressmen, members of the Legislature, and county and town officers. There are practically but two parties in the field, the Republican and Democratic. The candidates for Governor are: Sidney Perham, Republican, and present incumbent; Charles P. Kimball, Democrat, who has before been defeated in his aspirations for the gubernatorial chair. The vote of the State for this office and for President in recent years has resulted as follows:

Year.	Office.	Republican.	Democratic.
1871	Governor	58,757	48,126
1870	Governor	54,540	44,534
1869	Governor	51,079	39,854
1868	Governor	75 834	55,431
1868	President	70,426	44,389

In 1869, the temperance candidate for Governor received 4,743 votes. The State has been carried by the Republicans, annually, uninterruptedly for the past eighteen years. The Legislature chosen at the last election was composed, politically, as follows:

	Senate.	House.	Joint Ballot.
Republicans	29	112	133
Democrats	3	39	42
Vacancies	2	—	2
Republican majority	23	73	96

The vote for Congressmen in the several districts, two years ago, was as follows:

Dist.	Republican.	Democratic.	Rep. maj.
1	12,571	11,075	1,496
2	10,245	7,928	2,317
3	11,590	9,270	2,320
4	9,962	7,322	2,640
5	10,086	8,876	1,210

The candidates in the several districts this year are as follows:

Dist.	Republican.	Democrat.
1	John H. Rutleigh.	William H. Clifford.
2	William P. Frye.	Alonzo Garcelon.
3	James G. Blaine.	Thomas S. Lang.
4	Samuel F. Hersey.	Marcellus Emery.
5	Eugene Hale.	Frederick A. Pike.

VERMONT ELECTION.

All but Four Towns Heard From—Republican Majority About 26,000—The Senate Unanimously Republican.

BURLINGTON, Vt., Sept. 8.—Semi-official returns from all but four small towns give Converse 42,222 votes, and Gardner 16,604; Converse's majority, 25,618. The remaining towns gave, in 1870, 110 Republican majority. The Senate is unanimously Republican, and the House of Representatives stands as follows: Republicans, 206; Greeleyites, 21. In 1870 the Democrats had two Senators and twenty-nine Representatives.

CONNECTICUT.

The Vacancy in Mr. Strong's District—Gen. Hawley Spoken of.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

HARTFORD, Conn., Sept. 8.—The death of Congressman Strong makes it necessary for Gov. Jewell to issue his warrant for a special election in his district. It is thought that a separate affair will be made of it by delaying the vote until after the Presidential election, though it is possible that the vote may be ordered on the same day. Very many Republicans name Gen. Hawley as the probable Republican candidate, but it is doubtful that he will accept. The Democrats say that if he is run they will nominate W. W. Eaton. With two such positive men in the field the canvass would be an active one, and it would possess interest enough to be conducted by itself. My impression is that Gen. Hawley could carry the district handsomely.

DESTRUCTIVE FIRE IN MEMPHIS.

Large Number of Buildings Destroyed Loss Over $200,000.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Sept. 8.—The most destructive fire which has occurred here in ten years broke out at 2½ o'clock this morning at a shoemaker's shop, No. 42 Second-street. Owing to the long drouth and the combustible material of the surrounding buildings, the flames spread so rapidly before the engines were fairly at work, that it was thought that the great Chicago fire would be repeated, as within half an hour after the fire was discovered the entire block, from Union to Monroe-street, was on fire, and the air was filled with sparks which set fire to numerous places, some fully ten blocks distant from the scene. When the fire reached the extensive carriage-works of Bruce & Co., many of the guests in the Peabody Hotel, believing that the building would follow, hastily evacuated it. The streets were crowded with people, who were rendering valuable assistance in removing goods. Day was breaking when Bruce's manufactory fell with a terrible crash; its huge wall and roof smothering the raging flames inside, soon enabled the firemen to control; but southward the flames had spread to Brachett's livery stable, Wallace & Gibson's carriage works, and Ferris' livery stable, and, in fact, swept everything to Union-street. For a long time it was feared that the Opera-house, with the Post-office, Court-rooms, &c., would be burned. The streets were filled with the goods and inmates of small shops on Union-street, many of the inmates barely escaping with their lives. The total loss will not fall far short of $210,000, about one-half of which is covered by insurance, nearly all of which is in local companies.

SOUTH SHETLAND ISLANDS.

The Seal Fisheries—Character of the Trade—Equipments and Mode of Capture.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—In answer to a letter of inquiry in regard to a recent return from the Custom-house at Stonington, Conn., the Bureau of Statistics has received from Mr. Hubbard, Collector of that port, an interesting statement with regard to an important group of uninhabited islands situated south and east of Cape Horn, in latitude 61° to 63° south, longitude 54° to 63° west, and known as the New South Shetland Islands. These islands had not been visited for about twenty years, until within a year or two past, during which time thousands of sealskins of a very fine quality, as well as thousands of gallons of sea elephant oil, have been obtained. Mr. Hubbard expresses the opinion that if these islands were properly surveyed and their positions well defined, a very profitable business could be done there. He says the nature of the voyage is such as to require a large crew, being somewhat like a whaling voyage in this respect. The vessels carry three or four seal-boats, twenty-six or twenty-eight feet in length, each requiring a crew of five or six men. After reaching the islands they cruise about the group very cautiously and often leave a boat's crew where they find "rookery" of seal or sea elephant. These the crew kill as they deem proper, or hold possession of the "rookery" in case of competition. It sometimes happens that the seals are not in a proper condition to be taken, or that not enough have collected to warrant an attack. As the season is extremely short, not exceeding six or eight weeks, it is necessary to have a strong gang to take advantage of this kind of business. The voyage is usually of about ten months' duration from the time of leaving port.

GRANT AT SHILOH.

The Malignant Copperhead Slander Finally Disposed Of—Testimony of a Competent Witness as to Grant's Condition During the Battle.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 8.—Col. Stewart, of Indiana, now in this city, has just received a letter from Gen. J. D. Webster, Chief of Staff to Gen Sherman, in the war, in answer to one asking him, in view of charges that Gen. Grant was intoxicated at Shiloh, to state what he knew of Gen. Grant's condition during the two days of the battle, which effectually disposes of this long-standing slander.

CHICAGO, Sept. 4, 1872.

Col. Isaac S. Stewart:

DEAR SIR: Your note of the 2d inst. is just received, and in reply I have to state that you are authorized on my behalf to deny in the most emphatic manner all statements of Gen. Grant having been drunk or in any degree under the influence of liquor at the battle of Shiloh. I was at this time his Chief of Staff and Chief of Artillery. I breakfasted with the General at Savannah on Sunday, the first day of the battle. I went on board the boat with him and rode into the field with him at about 8½ o'clock, in person, and was necessarily with him, except at intervals of absence on duty, during the whole day. I lay down with him long after dark that night, on a small parcel of hay which the Quartermaster put down to keep us out of the mud, in the rear of the artillery line on the left, and I never heard till long afterward of any idea entertained by anybody that he was drunk, nor did I see him drink during the day, and I am sure he was perfectly sober as he was self-possessed and collected during the varying fortunes of that celebrated battle. If there are any words in which I can deny the miserable charge more fully and distinctly I am ready to adopt them.

Very truly yours, J. D. WEBSTER,
Late Brevet Major-General Volsunteers, and Chief of Staff to Gen. W. T. Sherman.

CUBA.

The Financial Question—Gen. Ceballos and His Winter Plan—Affairs in the Capital—Cruelty to Captives—The Porto Rico Elections—General Gossip.

From Our Own Correspondent.

HAVANA, Saturday, Aug. 31, 1872.

The financial question in this odd country is still engaging public attention, and the spasmodic ups and downs of gold and exchange have twisted the usual course of trade out of all shape. Neither the merchants nor the public know exactly where they stand or what to do, and none have the least idea of what may happen the next day. Messrs. Pedro Satolong and Manuel Calvo, the former a Cuban merchant, but thoroughly identified with the Spanish interest, and the latter a wealthy planter and formerly agent of the Spanish party in Madrid, both prominent leaders of the Spanish party, left for Spain in yesterday's mail steamer to attend to the projected sixty million loan, and, according to report, to work against the scheme in its present shape and present it in such a form as to meet the wants and desires of the wealthy slave and plantation owners, backed up by the influence of Gen. Ceballos. Gen. Ceballos tries to remain neutral, and is certainly not influenced by any mercenary or ambitious motives, but whether willingly or because he cannot stem the current, he is more in favor of the Zulueta ring than of any other, if popular rumor can be believed. I must say that this report may also have been set afloat by the Anti-Conchistas. Speaking of Conchs, it is again asserted that he will come here as Captain-General, while the old Valmasedistas have for the present given up all hopes of seeing their chief again. The majority believe that Gen. Ceballos will remain, and that Gen. Palacios will come here as Segundo Cabo. Gen. Ceballos forwarded his plan for the Winter campaign to Madrid by yesterday's steamer; the principal feature of this plan is to establish another military line, or Trocha, like that of Moron, somewhere in the Eastern Department, military engineers from that region having already arrived at Trocha to study the work, as if it were an affair demanding an exhibition of great skill. This sending plans and writing military treatises is a great parody on the war in Cuba, as it exists actually, and as it has existed for the past three years. Men and money are the only things needed to finish the revolution, the former to pursue the remaining bands of insurgents, and the latter for the double purpose of sustaining the Spanish Army and of paying such Cuban Generals or officers as choose to follow the example of Manuel Agramonte, Jesus del Sol, Urquira and others. The money can be had, but the men are difficult to obtain. In the present condition of matters Spain can not or will not send sufficient reinforcements for the requirements of the case, and the Spaniards in Cuba do not seem to be anxious to take the field like the regular troops, judging from the Havana and Matanzas volunteers. Perhaps it would not be wise to withdraw these volunteers, even if they intended to go, as this would enable the partisans of the rebellion to raise their heads, and perhaps become aggressive. Gen. Ceballos is trying to supply the present want of men by killing two birds with one stone; he obtains laborers for the works on the Trocha, and at the same time rids the country of the thousands of Spanish and Cuban vagrants who infest every place in the island, and particularly Havana. The number of robberies committed by day and by night is excessive, and the feeling of personal insecurity against evil-doers was never so great as it is at present. The most barefaced and daring robberies take place daily; gambling is carried on with the greatest shamelessness possible; the owners of corner groceries, who are Spaniards, and, with few exceptions, belong to the volunteer corps, have gambling carried on in their houses, and at three of the places surprised last week, volunteer officers were the presiding geniuses. The Spaniards are working against their interests in so many different ways that it is not worth while to waste words on their stupidity. All of the vagrants arrested are sent to the Trocha, but the police let the hardest cases alone, and the hundreds of penitentiary birds who were released from prison some three years ago, on condition of joining the mobilized volunteers, have returned in large numbers, and form the nucleus of the many robber bands now in existence. The arrests of these vagrants are often attended with serious consequences, but common humanity commands that, although the prisoners are rogues, they ought to be treated with some decency. A prisoner here is always led from place to place, with his hands tied behind his back, one end of the rope being held by the gendarmes. Two men, arrested without documents at Placetas, were being carried off by the mounted gendarmes to Matanzas. Both prisoners had to march fast to keep up with the horses, and of course they perspired heavily. In this country it is dangerous to get wet with perspiration. On reaching the Placetas River the prisoners were driven into it, although they begged to be allowed to cool themselves first; the water reached to their waists, and shortly after reaching the other side one man was taken with spasms and carried in a cart to Matanzas, where he died within half an hour, of lock-jaw. The Voz de Cuba presents the best project of all, namely, to rid the country of rogues by sending them to the Philippine Islands, citing the English colonization of Australia as an example of the success of a kindred measure.

A FRESH MANIFESTO.

The Emigrado, a Cuban journal published in New-Orleans, favorable to the Cuban cause after a fashion, but preferring to live under Spanish rather than under American rule, (or, as they always express it, Yankee rule,) has published a manifesto signed by eighty-nine Cubans, who are neither fish, flesh or fowl, and who are undoubtedly good material for repentant citizens of Spain, but in no way fit to become members of the great American Republic. That they do not like the United States, or its people, is a matter of intense interest to the Spanish party here, who take the article of the eighty-nine as balsam for their wounds; but the dire consequences which must result to the American Union if these eighty-nine should abandon its shores and return to Cuba, may be imagined, if they cannot be described. The same consequences may be felt if the statement of a Spanish paper is correct in saying that the New-Orleans Spaniards, whose long residence entitles them to a vote, have resolved to vote for Greeley and Brown. In the first place, Spaniards cannot vote, no matter how long they have resided in the United States, unless they have become naturalized citizens, and consequently are Americans, having sworn off all allegiance due to the country which gave them birth, and to the sovereign whose subjects they were. Whichever way they vote is a matter of small consequence, but either they are Spaniards or Americans; they cannot be subjects of a King and citizens of a republic at the same time.

THE PORTO RICO ELECTIONS.

The elections in Porto Rico appear to have gone all one way, namely—Radical, excepting in so far as the election of Gen. Sanz is concerned, he being classed as a Conservative. The Radical candidates elected are, as far as known, Gen. Cordova, the present Minister of War; Moret, the present Spanish Minister to England; Alvarez Georio, the Governor of Bilbao in Spain; Messrs. Padial, Sanroma, Blanco, Labra, Mosquera, Espinardo, Escoriaza and Alvarez Peralta, nearly all Republicans, and some of them out-and-out secessionists, and sympathizers with the Cuban revolutionists. It was feared that disturbances would occur in Porto Rico, the new Captain-General being resolved to carry out the instructions received from the Home Government, and refusing to become the tool of the ultra Spanish party.

WAR NEWS.

The war news is barely worth recapitulating, except the information about the attack on the town of Remanayaguas by the Cubans, on the 29th inst., the Spanish report stating that four hundred Cubans attacked the town, defended by only forty Spaniards; that the former were repulsed after killing two men and a woman, and that the forty men pursued the four hundred without losing a man. Happy forty and running four hundred! Se non è vero eben Trovato....The mobilized volunteer battalions Orden and Rodas have been formed into one battalion, deaths, desertion and other causes having diminished their number to a large extent....Two of Cespedes' staff officers, Col. Edward Suastegui and Major Carlos Estrada, who came over to the Spaniards, are now at Boyamo. Gen. Portillo is inspecting the Trocha....It is reported that the Cuban General, Joaquin Morales, commanding in the Cinco Villas, has surrendered. Spanish official reports mention nothing of the surrender.

MISCELLANEOUS GOSSIP.

A New-York correspondent of the Diario, copying from the TIMES, says: "A woman killed; a boy mortally wounded; four individuals assaulted, and a man robbed in the middle of the street, are a few of the crimes committed in New-York last Sunday." Serafin de Leon crushed the skull of his mistress, Louisa Prado; eighteen men and a boy aged nine years were stabbed, in different parts of the city; several houses were attacked and robbed in broad daylight; a woman was taken out of a hired cab near the cemetery and outraged; the headless trunk of a man was found floating in the bay. These, and numerous other crimes not mentioned, are samples of Havana morality last Sunday. Compare the size and the number of inhabitants of Havana with the magnitude and population of New-York, and then state the result to "Quasimodo." "En todas paries eneeen habas."....Several deaths, caused by bites from mad dogs, have occurred on the island, the patients dying in horrible suffering....The clerk of a bakery in Santiago de Cuba, fell in love with the colored servant. The husband of the colored girl, also a colored man, made some remarks to the clerk, when the latter picked up his volunteer's gun and killed the man; so runs the story; names are not given....An old Spanish gunboat, the Condor, which had been used as a guard-ship at San Cayetano, and was on its way to Havana to be sold at auction as useless, has been burnt at sea. The crew were saved....It is reported that the works on the Vento Canal, which is to supply Havana with water, are to be suspended for want of funds to carry on the work....The number of Spanish steamers running along the Cuban coast is increasing rapidly.

QUASIMODO.

DOWN-TOWN ON SUNDAY.

Appearance of the Lower Thoroughfares on Sunday Morning.

Those of our citizens who do not visit the lower part of the City on Sunday, can have but little idea of the deathlike stillness which characterizes Broad, Pine, Nassau, Wall, Cedar and other streets on that day. These thoroughfares are almost wholly deserted, and even on Broadway there is no danger of a saunterer being jostled off the sidewalk as would be the case on a "week-day." In Greenwich and Washington streets (lower end) were a few strangers lounging about the doors of emigrant boarding-houses, apparently uncertain what to do for amusement or instruction. Their attire betrayed recent arrival, and with the exception of conversing with their ship acquaintances they seemed to be at a complete loss. A few bleareyed men were endeavoring yesterday to engage the strangers' attention; but, with the usual distrust of foreigners, the new arrivals seemed to care little for their acquaintance.

At Washington Market, the dullness of this usually busy mart was noticeable. The stores were all closed, and the "rows," generally occupied by the produce dealers and wholesale butchers, bore no evidence of busy traffic. A few ragged children were yesterday wandering through the almost empty West Washington Market, eagerly seeking for some of the refuse fruit, meat or vegetables which might be lying around: although it was evident that "earlier birds" had been before them and secured the prizes if any there were.

The neighborhood of Printing-house square, after the publication of the Sunday papers had ceased, also presented a lonely aspect. Instead of the usual throng of pedestrians which daily centres in this thoroughfare, a few saunterers only could be seen. The cars, it is true, were passing to and fro with the usual jingling of the bells, but no heavy wagons or trucks impeded their progress. There was no long line of "blocked-up" cars to be seen, as is often the case during the week; travel was perfectly free in the roadway as on the sidewalk. The shoeblacks about the Park and French's Hotel appeared to be the only persons busy. The closed newspaper offices gave token of repose and rest for the Sabbath morning at least; although the actual work of the newspaper would certainly be going on elsewhere.

Turning from this place into the Swamp—that busy mart of leather dealers—the same silent dullness prevailed, except in the cases of a few reprobate-looking lads, who were engaged in Ferry-street pitching pennies and other petty gambling games. Passing thence into the more populated portion of the Fourth Ward, the little throngs of children, some neatly dressed and clean, others dirty and neglected, seated by the door-steps on the shady sides of the streets, betrayed clearly the fact that the heated tenement-houses had become unbearable, and that the little ones had sought a cooler and better atmosphere in the streets. From a partially-open window in Cherry-street could have been heard wrangling voices of male and female, with the occasional voice of "Pitch him out. Do you want to kill me entirely?" The effects of Saturday night's rum was apparent, although neither person could be seen.

Passing through the Seventh and Thirteenth Wards, these same sights and sounds could be observed, varied occasionally with the cry that a man here and there sought to sleep off the liquor on the shady sidewalk instead of the house, be doubtless having visited some "bucket shop" to get an "eye-opener," and had taken too many. In one case, on Madison-street, a little boy was trying to get his drunken father home, and the perseverance shown by the little fellow was worthy a better cause and a better man.

To reach the Bowery from the Thirteenth Ward the writer had to pass through the Tenth Ward, principally occupied by Germans. With the exception of the immense throngs of neatly-dressed children, who were quietly playing or walking about, the Ward was perfectly quiet. Along the Bowery there was to be seen several pedestrians, although few compared with the ordinary daily travel of this thoroughfare. This same characteristic marked Fourth-avenue and Union-square, except that on the seats of the latter place were to be seen several men sitting and reading the Sunday papers.

Returning down Broadway, with the exception of the congregation leaving Grace Church after the morning service, but little was to be seen. The stores were all closed, and there being no gay throng on the sidewalks the usual loungers at the hotels had doubtless retired to the reading-rooms, or sought the more attractive region of the Central Park.

Saturday's markets much resembled those of Friday. Gold varied between 112⅜ and 113½, and closed 112⅜. Exchange was still without demand, say 108 bid for prime Sterling, against offerings at 108½, and the stock market, vigorous in the morning, was then depressed, to close at prices near the best of the day. In the latter part of the week Erie became uninteresting, except for speculation as to the scarcity of stock for daily deliveries, and as to the rates which holders may agree to set upon its use. So far, 1-32 ₱ cent. bonus, as a sort of daily dividends, has contented the German bankers, who are the chief reliance of borrowers of Erie. Pacific Mail settled into comparative quiet after having fallen as low as 69⅜ on the confirmation (by second telegram from Shanghai to the Company) of the loss by fire of the America; for the Bienville disaster had already expended its force in the stock market. The stock has established a rally of some 2 ₱ cent. from the lowest point reached; and it is fair to remark that the decline was not accompanied by anything like panic. The general list of stocks moved moderately up and down, apparently under the guidance of a speculation confined chiefly to the members of the Stock Exchange. The temper of this inside speculation was undoubtedly bearish, if only for quick turns, until Friday afternoon, when a sudden demand for New-York Central induced general buying. On Saturday the same stock governed the course of business, rising from 99½ to 100¾, carrying other things in the same direction. At this advance sellers appeared in such force as to cause a reaction of 1 ₱ cent., and, the Bank statement coming on top of this, and being popularly accepted as much worse than it really was, flattened everything for an hour or so. But the reflection that the Banks had lost mainly in Specie, and had evidently been able to pay out National Bank Notes in a way that shows this currency to be perfectly satisfactory to their dealers, seemed to encourage buyers again, and, if there were really anything in the prospect of an extra dividend on New-York Central, they safely concluded that it was one day nearer than on Friday. Accordingly, New-York Central rallied to 100¾, Pacific Mail from 70⅜ to 71½, Western Union from 70⅜ to 71⅛@71½, and the rest of the list about a quarter ₱ cent. C., C. and I. C. became active on the last day of the week, rising from 35½ to 36½ and closing at 35½. But there has been no general activity in stocks, and prices are, most of them, rather below those current a week earlier.

Money for demand loans has varied between three and six ₱ cent., closing easy at four. Time loans are stiffly held; Coin interest for sixty days being about the standard. Gold is so managed as to cost daily borrowers about 1-32 ₱ cent. for the day; and time loans are still in good demand, say at 1@1½ for thirty days. The decline in Sterling continued through the week, with no appearance of buyers at the end of it. The importers seem to have made their purchases for a time, taking the opportunity given by the first fall of Gold below 113. At the present moment the Cotton bills are wanted, to make anything like an active trade in Exchange.

We are informed that the link connecting the West Wisconsin Railroad with the Chicago and North-western Road will be finished in October next, in compliance with a contract between both Companies to make a through line from Chicago to St. Paul.

The Board of Directors of the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad Company confidently announce the probability of the early completion of the great enterprise of extending the road through to the Ohio River, the latest reports of the Chief Engineer justifying the expectation that trains will be running by or before the 1st of December. Frequent mention has been made in these columns of the importance of this road as a great east and west trunk line, its promise of cheap transit of the great products of the West to the Atlantic seaboard, under eminently favorable conditions for economical working, such as low grades, cheap fuel, supplies, &c., as also of the assurances of an extensive and lucrative local traffic in the iron, coal, and other resources of the section of the country which the road will open and develop. The management of the road is under the control of New-York capitalists and business men of the highest standing and large influence. The attention of investors will be attracted by the offer of the Board of Directors for sealed proposals until Monday, Sept. 16, of the limited amount of the First Mortgage Six per Cent. coin-bearing Bonds of the Road remaining at the disposal of the Company. The successful negotiation of the loan thus far, and the substantial character of the enterprise which it represents, entitle this proposition of the management to prompt and favorable consideration.

BANKING AND FINANCIAL.

☞ANNOUNCEMENT FOR PROPOSALS.

OFFICE OF FISK AND HATCH, BANKERS AND FINANCIAL AGENTS OF THE CHESAPEAKE AND OHIO RAILROAD COMPANY, NEW-YORK, Sept. 9, 1872.

By direction of the President and Directors of the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad Company, we offer for proposals all the remaining balance of their FIRST MORTGAGE SIX PER CENT. GOLD BONDS, now amounting to $2,923,700. Proposals must be accompanied by a deposit of five per cent., and will be received up to and including Monday, the 16th inst., the Directors reserving the right to reject any proposals which may not be for the interests of the Company to accept. The five per cent. deposit will be applied toward the payment, in case of accepted bids, and returned to those whose proposals are not accepted.

The President of the Company, Mr. C. P. HUNTINGTON, is well known as the Vice-President of the CENTRAL PACIFIC RAILROAD COMPANY, and the same energy displayed in the management of that corporation, and to which its remarkable success is so largely due, is being put forth in the CHESAPEAKE AND OHIO.

The Board of Directors is composed of probably as strong and able men as were ever associated together to carry out a great enterprise. Among them are the following well-known New-York Merchants:

Messrs. A. A. LOW, WM. H. ASPINWALL,
JONAS G. CLARK, DAVID STEWART,
WM. WHITEWRIGHT.

This road will extend from Richmond to the beach of the great West, at a point on the Ohio River, 313 miles below Pittsburg, where it will at once connect with 12,000 miles of river navigation, and soon by connecting roads with the whole great system of Western railroads, thus giving a short, direct and easy-grade outlet to the millions of people and inexhaustible products of the West to the Atlantic coast, and in return furnishing them with the manufactures of the East, and cheap coal and cheap iron from along the line of the road. Its traffic must be immense. It will cost, fully equipped, upward of $30,000,000. Of the whole length of the line, 427 miles, at this date 360 miles are completed; the grading is nearly done on the remainder, the iron is being rapidly laid, and during November next, it is expected trains will run through to the Ohio River.

The western end, 200 miles, will be nearly all laid with steel rails; the bridging all iron, and the masonry first class in every respect.

The total amount of these bonds is $15,000,000. The amount sold by us from the date of bringing out the loan is $14,489,600.

The amount now offered by us is made up as follows:

Unsold balance of loan as above	$510,400
Repurchased and received in exchange for debenture bonds of the Company	2,413,300
Leaving balance subject to proposals	$2,923,700

Should the proposals exceed this amount, a proper award among the accepted proposals will be made. An opportunity for savings banks, insurance companies, estates and investors to get so good a bond on a great road, at a moderate price, is rarely offered.

The bonds are issued in denominations of $100, $500 and $1,000; either coupon or registered; interest payable May and November, both principal and interest payable in New-York City in United States gold coin. The accrued interest from May 1 will be added to all accepted proposals.

Proposals should be addressed to

FISK & HATCH, Financial Agents,
Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad Company.

Trustees—Farmers' Loan and Trust Company of New-York.

The diminished quantity of these Bonds for sale, and the increased demand absorbing them, warrant the belief that they will soon be sought for at an advance considerably above the present subscription price at which they can now be had through the principal banks and bankers throughout the country, and from the undersigned, who unhesitatingly recommend them.

In the contest in Maine today our readers will please remember that we are not likely to get out our full vote. Whatever our majority may be, it will be greater in November by many thousands. The Republicans of the State are, to some extent, divided by the rigorous and vigorous inforcement of the amended Liquor law, which interdicts ale, lager and cider. This will tell against us in the cities chiefly, and the first news is not likely to be the best.

Speaker BLAINE has seen fit to promptly put an end to the fabrication regarding his having been interested in the Credit Mobilier of the Union Pacific Railway Company. His reason for meeting this lie with an explicit denial is that it was put in a specific form, and meant to be widely circulated in the Boston and New-York papers, throughout his district to affect the vote on Monday.

Among the slanders which were sprung from Copperhead brains during the war, and which are now being spread by Greeleyite papers, is a story that Gen. GRANT was intoxicated at Shiloh. This is set at rest by the letter of Gen. J. D. WEBSTER in another column. The General, who was chief of staff and of artillery at the time, and was constantly with GRANT, denies absolutely the statement referred to. It is unpleasant to recognize even the existence of these base slanders, and we wish the desperation and meanness of their authors left any room to hope that a new crop will not spring when the old ones are broken down.

The amazing ignorance of the Tribune under its present management was pretty well illustrated by its statement on Saturday that it had supported Mr. EDWIN D. MORGAN, "one of the principal stockholders of the TIMES," for Governor. Any point which the Tribune may have desired to make under cover of this statement, is entirely destroyed by the fact that Mr. E. D. MORGAN does not own a share of this paper. Why does Mr. GREELEY not put some one to work at his organ who understands something about the men and the politics of New-York State?

The Sham Reform Ticket.

The Greeleyite organs throughout the State evidently find it very hard work to simulate anything like enthusiasm over the State ticket nominated at Syracuse. This is not to be wondered at. The name placed at the head of the ticket is that of a man all whose excellencies are of a negative character, and whose record has been of the cautious, hesitating sort, which may have given offense to few, but which has also given positive satisfaction to none. All the eulogists of FRANCIS KERNAN appear to think it necessary to apologize for his religion. The World makes the somewhat unguarded admission that his nomination was intended to rally the whole Catholic population of the State to the support of the ticket, while the country Press, with rather better judgment, takes the trouble to assure us that Mr. KERNAN is not much of a Roman Catholic after all. It is rather difficult to see how political capital can be made, on one side, out of the strict Catholicism of a man, one of whose chief claims to the support of the other side seems to be that he holds opinions on the relations between Church and State diametrically opposed to those held by some of the chief Catholic dignitaries in the Union. The reconciliation of these two positions is no business of ours. Those who have raised the issue can make the most of it, and may safely be left also to satisfy the doubts of those German Democrats who, familiar with the struggle between Church and State which is being waged in Fatherland, are desirous of knowing what is the precise position of Mr. KERNAN in regard to recent papal encyclicals and allocutions. If, as his friends assert, the precise color of Mr. KERNAN's Catholicism has something to do with his claims on the support of the people of New-York, then the matters we have referred to, must be equally germane to his candidature.

As a patriot, Mr. KERNAN finds his praise rather in things left undone than in brave deeds performed. It has been charged that when on April 15, 1861, the bill was introduced into the State Assembly to raise ten thousand troops, and appropriate $3,000,000, in response to the call of President LINCOLN, Mr. KERNAN denounced the act as unconstitutional and tyrannical. What he certainly did do was to absent himself from his seat when the bill was voted on. He lacked the courage to place himself on record with the six Democrats who voted against the bill, and he certainly did not sympathise with the score of Democrats who voted in its favor. Then, again, Mr. KERNAN was temporary Chairman of the Democratic State Convention which met at Syracuse, Sept. 4, 1861. How the resolutions of that body were neither cold nor hot, how they condemned Northern patriots with more vigor than they did Southern traitors, and how overwhelming was the popular condemnation passed upon them by the voters of this State, is matter of history. And yet, Mr. KERNAN stands on record as having declared that "the resolutions could not be objected to by any fair-minded man." If Mr. KERNAN has never been intimately associated with the Tammany Ring, he, at least, refrained from any active opposition to its tyranny till its members had been branded as public plunderers and saddled with a load of infamy which his party could not afford to carry. Since the Rochester Convention, Mr. KERNAN may have done something to aid in bringing the Tammany thieves to justice; we, at least, have not heard of it. That the corrupt elements in the State administration do not expect very rough treatment at the hands of Mr. KERNAN, may be inferred from the fact that his nomination was favored by the chiefs of the Canal Ring. The candidate himself has given the earliest possible confirmation of this view by stating in his speech in response to a serenade with which he was honored the other night by his admirers in Utica, that he was pledged to "reform in the State administration if there be anything which needs it." Compare this with the emphatic declaration of Gen. DIX and draw your own conclusions: "The Convention but gave voice to the wishes of all men in the State, without regard to party, who desire a thorough reform and honest administration of our State affairs."

It is very evident that any candidate who stands upon a platform which squarely indorses the administration of Gov. HOFFMAN must, necessarily, have a very indifferent claim to the title of a Reformer. The old Tammany gang and their prototypes the Canal Ring, are probably right in the calculation that it would take the judicially-minded Mr. KERNAN his entire term, supposing him to be elected, to make up his mind whether there were really any abuses in the administration of public affairs, in regard to which he ought to take a vigorous stand. They may, at least, calculate with perfect safety that all the influence of the nominee for Lieutenant-Governor will be exerted on their side, whatever the merits of the case may be. A man who has thriven amid the atmosphere of the Albany lobby, who has enjoyed considerable personal influence over Judge BARNARD, and who has been the agent of the most rapacious schemes of one of the most unscrupulous corporations in the country, is a very fitting instrument for the manipulation of Senatorial committees and the setting of points of order in a way adverse to the public interest. What the Democracy thought of CHAUNCEY M. DEPEW in 1865 may be partially learned from the extracts from the World given in our columns today. If the World and its friends have not found reason to change their opinions about Mr. DEPEW—and they never said they had—he is a "swindler," a "bold, arrant cheat," and a good deal more to the same purpose. They may rejoin that they have nominated him precisely because of these useful qualifications, and the fact that he has become a Democratic candidate instead of a Republican one may form an excuse for not carrying out the World's threat about the amiable intentions of "the unwashed" in regard to "Census" DEPEW. In any case, to claim the title of Reformer for such a man is calculated to make people laugh. A representative German remarked, at a Democratic meeting on Saturday: "He would not cast his vote for CHAUNCEY DEPEW for Lieutenant-Governor. The latter had fought him, and other good citizens, too hard on the 'sink the track and arch it over' business." Just so, and whenever the interests of Commodore VANDERBILT are placed on one side and those of the people on the other, nobody has any doubt as to where the Democratic nominee for Lieutenant-Governor will be found.

The Logic of Figures.

It is a favorite amusement of the arithmetic men, which the World and Tribune keep, having borrowed them for the campaign from some wandering tribe of (Tammany) Indians, to show how small a per centage of votes need to be changed, as compared with the vote of 1868, to defeat GRANT. They say the total vote was 5,716,788, out of which GRANT had a majority of only 309,588, which was 5.42 per cent. of the whole. Now, they say, change only 154,794 from one side to the other and you elect GREELEY. Even the arithmetic men are too wise to deceive themselves by such shallow pretense, but they obviously mean to deceive others. If we elected the President by an aggregate popular vote, and not by the vote of the several States in the Electoral College, this figuring would be all right. But a minute's reflection will show that under the system which exists no account should be taken of any change in those States which cast their electoral votes for SEYMOUR in 1868. There may be in those a change of even fifty per cent. in favor of the Sage, and yet that would not affect the result or defeat GRANT. The only question is what change adverse to GRANT in the States which voted for him in 1868 will now defeat him. If we take these States in the aggregate we shall find the following result: Georgia, Delaware, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, New-York and Oregon voted for SEYMOUR, and gave him an aggregate majority of 204,410. Deducting them, GRANT's aggregate majority in the remaining States was 513,998, or about nine per cent. of the aggregate vote. It would therefore require a change of 256,999 votes, or four and a half per cent. from GRANT to GREELEY, distributed equally throughout these States, to defeat the former. But if, as is the only fair way, we follow the matter into each State, we find that in Iowa, Illinois, Kansas, Maine, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, Nevada, New-Hampshire, Rhode Island, South Carolina, Tennessee, Vermont, West Virginia and Wisconsin, casting 142 electoral votes, the majorities for GRANT were, in 1868, in round numbers, from ten to sixty per cent. of the whole vote, and that in these States there must be a change of from five to thirty per cent. to transfer them to GREELEY. In States casting ninety-two electoral votes the majority was over fifteen per cent., and the change there must be over seven and a half per cent., and in States casting sixty-five electoral votes the majority was twenty per cent. and over, and the change must be over ten per cent. In Ohio, North Carolina, and Arkansas, casting thirty-eight electoral votes, the majority was from seven to ten per cent., and the change must be from three and a half to five per cent., while in Pennsylvania, Indiana, Connecticut and Alabama, casting sixty electoral votes, the majority was from four and a half to three per cent., and in California, with six electoral votes, it was only one-half of one per cent.

These figures are, after all, more curious than useful, for so far we get no indications that the change from GRANT to GREELEY amounts in the aggregate to any per cent. at all.

The Neutrals in the Campaign.

No man can be neutral in the present campaign. Every vote withheld from a candidate is one vote less for the opposing candidate to overcome. And, apart from this fact, which alone settles the question, every man's views and opinions influence those of his associates, and it is mere absurdity to affect to refrain from extending his influence by the casting of a vote.

Moreover, to our mind, there are solid reasons why no intelligent man should be willing to shirk his duty in this canvass. If the political coalition entered into at Cincinnati and Baltimore is to succeed, it ought not to do so without the opposition of all fair-minded and sensible men. If Baltimore is to be held up to future politicians as a specimen of what can be done without principles, without political conscience, in defiance of common sense, and by the use of sheer defiant impudence, the effect on the welfare of republican government is something we don't like to think of. Now, whether the Baltimore bargain shall prove profitable or not, is a question for individual voters to answer. They are the only ones who can answer it, and each must do his part. It will do no good hereafter, when the evils to which insincerity and unscrupulous ambition give birth are upon us, to say that in 1872, politics had already become so corrupt as to drive decent men away. It will be time then to remember with bitterness that when the vile growth might have been cut down, or at least pruned, indifference allowed it to go on and increase.

Certainly nothing is lacking in the present condition of politics to engage the active sympathy of those who have stood by the Republican Party in the last twelve years. In a measure, everything the party has struggled for is at stake, except the legal destruction of slavery. The principle of the supremacy of the Federal Union is involved, because one of the parties in the contest includes all but a minute fraction of the secessionists of the country who believe in secession as a doctrine, and it is led by a man who also believed in it in 1860 and 1861. If it is said that the issue is settled forever, we invite attention to the fact that the secession of 1861 originated in a party which for thirty years previous had also been composed of secessionists, headed by complaisant Northerners.

The establishment of equal political and civil rights is certainly at stake. Messrs GREELEY and SUMNER say these rights are secured by the Democrats recognizing them. But the question is not one of recognizing, but of heartily respecting them. Democrats with GREELEY in the White House will be no more molined to do the latter than they were with JOHNSON there. They are thoroughly hostile to negro equality in every shape. They don't believe in it. They regard it as bad in policy, unconstitutionally secured, and an outrage on the Southern States. It is true they do not now profess these views; but neither do they deny them, and less than a year ago they did profess and urge them. Ask any honest Democrat if he does not still entertain them, and he will answer yes as a matter of course. Certainly those who are convinced of the justice and necessity of equal rights for all in this counry, ought to help by their votes to decide that the preservation and sure establishment of these rights be left in the hands of those who believe in them, in the right to sustain them and in passing the laws required for that purpose.

Equally with these great issues is involved the not less important one of administrative reform. We have no hesitation in saying that nine-tenths of the men who are intelligently interested in the administrative reforms thus far broached, are in the Republican Party, and that nine-tenths of the men who utterly repudiate any principle whatever in politics, and believe in the subordinating everything to selfish ends, are in the opposition. On the one hand we have President GRANT, who has done more and more practically for civil service reform than any previous President, since the service needed reforming. With the President are a great many earnest men who will sustain him in pushing this reform to its utmost practical limits. On the other hand, we have Mr. GREELEY, who knows little and cares less about civil service reform, who has always been a partisan politician, and who is now nominated by his political opponents to enable them to regain power, and on the distinct pledge that he will distribute the offices proportionately among them. Is there any room for doubt as to the party with which civil service reform would stand the best chance?

Dirt in Philadelphia.

The recent Grand Jury presentment in Philadelphia, is by no means complimentary to the cleanliness of that city. They say that the streets, had it not been for the heavy showers there this Summer, would have been perfectly filthy. Their statements on this subject contain no new information to the inhabitants of the Quaker City, though it was their duty to bring the matter officially to the attention of the Court, and they deserve great credit for the fearless and unequivocal manner in which they have represented the facts in the case.

Philadelphia has for many years been an exceedingly dirty city. We do not say how it has compared in this respect with New-York. The question is one which we have frequently heard discussed; but as there seems to be an honest difference of opinion among candid and unprejudiced men in regard to it, we do not wish to take the responsibility of giving a decision upon so nice and delicate a point. As a general rule, we have found that a man who had seen much of both places was apt to consider that one the dirtier which he had last visited. But whatever may be true in reference to this comparison, it is certain that the streets of Philadelphia are abominably, unwholesomely, disgracefully, odoriferously, and, we fear, increasingly dirty. To this fact no part of the city forms any exception. Not only in the courts and alleys, where are the abodes of the wretched and degraded, but in the very finest parts of West Walnut and Spruce streets, the truth would—especially if the weather were warm—be evident to any one with at all sensitive olfactory apparatus, in the middle of the darkest night. After a succession of violent rains, things are sometimes a little better for a while; but it is rare, indeed, that the streets show any evidence of an attempt at cleaning by brooms or other artificial agencies.

There was a long series of years when Philadelphia claimed to be the cleanest city in the world. Whether this claim was or was not well founded, there was certainly no inconsiderable force in it. It was for those times, and, in fact, for any times, a remarkably neat city. Indeed, so high was its reputation in this respect, that although at least a quarter of a century has elapsed since it had any claim to this character, there are persons at a distance from it who are still under the impression that it continues to be a model of cleanliness. In one respect there is some truth in this. The very great neatness which was formerly characteristic of the style of living of the people, and was especially observable among the laboring classes, has by no means entirely disappeared. The sidewalks, also, are still scrubbed as vigorously, and the water splashed on Saturday mornings about the feet of pedestrians as remorselessly as ever. But all this only goes as far as the curb-stone. Beyond that, the dirtiness of the city is a matter of history. The cleanliness of the roadway of Philadelphia streets, like the glory of Greece and Rome, is all in the past, and the significant "Black your boots, Sir," which meets the ear of the traveler as he walks by the old State-house, has little in it to encourage a hope that that traditional cleanliness will soon be seen again.

The mortality of Philadelphia, especially among children, during the hot weather of the past Summer, was frightful. It was not, it is true, so great, even in proportion to the population, as that of this City; but when we remember how many more of the people in New-York live several families in the same house, and also how much greater our foreign population is, the unwholesome effect of the condition of the streets can scarcely be looked upon as much greater here than it has been there. But however this may be, there can exist no reasonable doubt that hundreds of graves of little children, and not a few of older persons, have been dug in Philadelphia and its neighborhood this Summer, which would not have been opened if the city authorities had done anything like their duty in cleansing the streets. Whether the same state of things will remain to invite a similar mortality next Summer is yet to be seen; but from the presentment of the Grand Jury, it is evident that they, at least, see no indications of even a serious attempt on the part of those who have principal charge of the matter at improving the condition of affairs.

Preaching and Practice.

The Professor of Journalism looked forward, a little while ago, to a certain "needed reform." It was the chief of a number of reforms. In a sense it might be said to include most others in the field to which it related. The "needed reform" in question consists, to use the Professor's own words, "in an increasing sense of responsibility for the printed word;" with which was to come "an increasing sense of the wrong every editor does the whole profession, who permits his press to become the vehicle either for actual slander, or for that reckless trifling with character and that invasion of personal concerns which make so marked a feature of many of our most successful newspapers."

These noble sentiments and prognostications having been thus nobly expressed, the "Professor" proceeded to illustrate them on Monday last by one of the most flagrant and most ill-considered attacks on a private citizen that has ever appeared in a New-York newspaper. If the assault on Mr. HENRY CLEWS printed in the Tribune on that day be not at once "a reckless trifling with character," and "an invasion of personal concerns," we know not what is; and the baseness of the act is inexpressibly deepened by its animus, which is neither more nor less than simple anger, because Mr. CLEWS, as a business man, thinks it better for the business interests of the country that Gen. GRANT should be elected President than Mr. GREELEY. More than this, the "Professor" perfectly well knew, before the article in question was published, that Mr. CLEWS was in a position entirely to refute, and, indeed, had conclusively refuted, the allegations of the article, in every substantial sense, and the publication was consequently an act of mere wanton malice, which, we do not hesitate to say, suggests neither "a sense of responsibility for the printed word," nor the feelings of a gentleman.

Mr. CLEWS, be it remembered, is a private individual; "not an office-holder, nor a candidate for office"—not a public man, responsible through the tenancy of office. He is not in the position, in a word, of Mr. JAMES R. DOOLITTLE, who, as a Senator of the United States, committed, in 1864, an act disgraceful to himself and to his party; but which, the very next day after its contemptible attack on Mr. CLEWS, the Tribune, with astounding self-stultification, undertook to defend, and to take us to task for exposing. Now, if Mr. CLEWS had been a United States Senator, and the Tribune had not been apprised beforehand, on the best authority, that its charges against him were false, that paper might have been justified in its onslaught of Monday. But, in both these respects, the "Professor" has placed himself ludicrously in the wrong, alike in etiquette and in morals; while his attempted defense of DOOLITTLE is no less weak and inconsistent than his previous attack was unwarranted and malicious.

MINOR TOPICS.

The report of the Canadian Minister of Agriculture and Immigration, giving the expenditures in detail of his Department during the year 1871, exhibits a curious contrast to our own more cumbrous and expensive system of disposing of emigrants arriving at this port. Thus, we find that the total expense of the Quebec agency for the year was $26,263 79. For this sum 37,020 emigrants were relieved and forwarded to their destination, $20,343 91 being expended for transport alone. The Montreal agency assisted 2,719 persons, at a total expense of $3,885 53. The Toronto agency passed 25,591 emigrants, and expended only $614 24; the Kingston agency $1,387 35 on 3,385 persons, and the Hamilton agency $1,672 85 on 1,090. These economical expenditures may perhaps be accounted for when we find one of the agents charging only $90 for expenses incurred during a tour of eighteen days, and another stating, in answer to an inquiry, that his office accommodation is in every way satisfactory.

Now this is carrying matters to an undurable extreme. Newspapers have already committed innumerable crimes in the way of corrupting the language. We daily meet with the hideous term "collide," while the "reliable" gentleman has persistently carried worthless information to newspaper offices for ten years past, merely for the pleasure of seeing himself alluded to by that infamous epithet. The World has been one of the worst offenders in this matter, for it has invented "burgle" and "scuttle," as descriptive of the occupation of the burglar and the scuttler; but a Terre Haute paper has fairly eclipsed it by asserting of persons about to marry that they propose to "nuptiole." Nothing can be worse than this, and forbearance with the author of such base coinage ceases to be a virtue. He deserves to be "nupticled" in company with the most exasperatory of the strong-minded women, and to perpetually collide during the remainder of his life with marital broom-sticks and kettles of hot water.

The scientific persons who have been attending the meeting of the American Association have made a discovery which greatly delights them. In the course of an excursion on the Upper Mississippi they found a water-lily of the same family as the Egyptian lotos. So enthusiastic was the reception given to this relative of the classic lotos that various scientific persons, with more zeal than judgment, ate largely of its seeds, thereby incurring hideous remorse of stomach, but at the same time enabling them to class themselves hereafter with the dreamy lotophagi. In the opinion of the American lotos-eaters the Mississippi is now almost as interesting as the Nile. You have only to "make believe" that the new water-lily is a genuine lotos, and to consider the work of the mound-builders as the same thing as the pyramids, and you have an American Nile. The Marchioness performed a somewhat similar feat in making believe that lemon-peel and water was identical with wine, but her task was an easy one compared with that undertaken by the American Association of Lotos-Eaters.

Holders of property on the East River near Blackwell's Island are laying to their respective souls the flattering unction that, when the obstructions in the channel at Hell Gate are removed, the European steamers will reach the City through the Sound, and establish landing-places and warehouses in the neighborhood of Fiftieth and Sixtieth streets. Now the fallacy of this belief is clearly shown by the fact that the channel in the lower Bay is perfectly safe, while the Sound is a place full of dangers to steam-ships. There is not only the danger of collision, but there are, also, the perils of shoals and sand-bars, and the difficulties of currents and fogs, which will remain, even after the rocks of Hell Gate are removed. There is not the slightest reason why the European steamers should forsake the safe paths of Sandy Hook for the tortuous channels of Hell Gate and the Sound: and those who are building high hopes upon the effect upon commerce of the mining operations at Hallett's Point are doomed to certain disappointment.

The fashion of shooting at street-car conductors which was recently set by a New-York rough, is not calculated to make the conductor's life an enviable one. A much worse thing has, however, befallen a Boston conductor, which, if it is instituted elsewhere, will speedily render the possibility of inducing any man to accept charge of a street-car extremely doubtful. A day or two ago a Boston car was stopped by a young person bearing a child in her arms. She evinced considerable anxiety about the child, and finally, in order to avoid dropping and breaking it, handed it to the conductor to hold until she should have mounted the platform. No sooner was the infant safe in the conductor's arms than the unpleasant young person briskly retreated round the corner, leaving her victim in the possession of an undesirable baby, which it was impossible that he should properly care for without at the same time neglecting his opportunities for collecting and confiscating fares. If other women with superfluous babies imitate this example, street-cars will inevitably cease to run for want of conductors.

A sale of curious autographs has just now taken place in London which indicates in an interesting manner the comparative value placed on worthies who have passed away. Many of the letters were written by the poet COWPER, and of these one brought £4 13s. GIBBON's letter predicting the success of BOSWELL's Johnson, brought £5 7s. 6d., while a letter of the Duke of WELLINGTON went for 3s. 6d., and one of GEO. CANNING's for one shilling. An autograph of SARAH SIDDONS fetched £5 5s., while a letter from the "first gentleman in Europe" to RICHARD BRINSLEY SHERIDAN sold for a guinea. Some letters of MENDELSSOHN went for £2 10s., and various theatrical letters, of people even lately deceased, brought high prices. It is remarkable of this sale, which was made by a first-rate London firm, and long advertised, that the letters of military heroes went cheaper than those of statesmen, those of statesmen for less than those of literary celebrities, and that the autographs of famous players and singers, realized, relatively speaking, the best prices of the whole.

The 20th of August was "Forester's Day" at the Sydenham Crystal Palace, and the enormous number of eighty-five thousand persons gathered in the huge glass-house on the occasion. Lord BUCKHURST must have been horrified by what BLONDIN, the great rope-walker did to honor the day, since his exploits appear to have outshone all he ever did before. The gymnast walked a cord five hundred feet long and eighty feet from the ground, in a suit of heavy armor. A high wind was blowing at the time, but in spite of this BLONDIN afterward walked the rope blindfold, walked it in a sack, walked it with his agent on his shoulders, and finally cooked an excellent omelette on the middle of the rope—the quality of his cooking being vouched for by a capital judge, who afterward ate it below. All this is very imposing, and has got M. BLONDIN an immense deal of advertising: but is not his time, like VAN AMBURGH's, certain to arrive some day, when, in common with the "lion-king," his nerve may fail for an instant, and all these triumphs end in a fatal catastrophe at the last? Who lives will see, we fear, nothing less.

The War Record of Kernan.

Men are judged more by their records than by their professions. Of the record that Francis Kernan has made the Syracuse Journal thus speaks: "In those days when treason and loyalty confronted each other for the supremacy, how stood the war record of Francis Kernan? He was one of the most notorious secession sympathizers in this State. When the rebels fired upon Sumter, he was a member of the Legislature of the State of New-York. Then was the time when every citizen, and especially every one who held an official position by the grace of the people, should have given all the influence at his command to the cause of the Union. But the voice of Francis Kernan was raised in denunciation of the measures that were brought forward to facilitate the work of raising the quota of men which the proclamation of Abraham Lincoln required of this State. When Gov. Morgan sent a message to the Assembly, stating that President Lincoln had called for the militia of the several loyal States to aid in suppressing the rebellion, and urging the Legislature to take action which would confer upon the Governor larger discretionary powers to embody and equip a volunteer militia, no word of encouragement came from the lips of Francis Kernan. Subsequently when the Three Million Defense bill, which Mr. Kernan had previously denounced as unconstitutional, came up for final passage in the House, at a time when the country's emergency demanded that every member should be in his seat, Mr. Kernan dodged the vote by absenting himself. During his career in Congress, while the war was being waged, he was known to sympathize with those who were in arms against the Union. Mr. Kernan's record, compared with that of Gen. Dix, is as black to white. The former was a bigoted partisan; the latter was a noble patriot. The former was ready to do anything in his power for party; the latter was ready to do everything he could for country. Mark the contrast!"

TWEED AND GREELEY.

Greeley as a Beggar, a Partner of the Ring and a Tobacconist.

We showed some time since that Horace Greeley, the life-long opponent of tobacco, and the honest (?) opponent of corruption, had within a brief period been jointly interested with William M. Tweed and other members of the Ring in an enterprise for manufacturing cigars. We published at that time an attested copy of the certificate of incorporation of "The Tobacco Manufacturers' Association," by which it appeared that Horace Greeley, William M. Tweed, Nathaniel Sands and others, on April 25, 1871, formed themselves into a corporation, with a capital of $175,000, for the purpose of "manufacturing tobacco and cigars by machinery and otherwise, and for manufacturing machinery and utensils for the purpose of manufacturing tobacco and cigars, and for purchasing all the proper stock, tobacco, materials, utensils and machinery for the purpose of manufacturing tobacco, cigars utensils and machinery, and also for the further purpose of selling the tobacco, cigars, utensils and machinery so to be manufactured as aforesaid." As soon as we published this certificate Mr. Greeley's friends set to work to explain it. One journal at the West asserted that Mr. Greeley's name was used without his consent, conveniently overlooking the fact that Mr. Greeley signed and acknowledged before a notary the certificate under which the Company was formed, that he was made one of the nine trustees of the Company, and that he attended meetings of the trustees. Another journal said that all there was of it was that Greeley lent his name to oblige a friend, but had no real interest in the Company, an excuse which makes Mr. Greeley a sort of confidence operator, and which, if true, would entitle him to the name of Decoy Greeley. Judge Hoadley, of Cincinnati, having, in a speech recently, referred to the fact that Greeley "was in partnership with Tweed in the tobacco business," the Cincinnati Enquirer, in an article headed "A Lie Out of Whole Cloth," boldly says:

"We cannot believe that Judge Hoadly would knowingly state that which he knew to be false, but in this instance his strong prejudices against Greeley have induced him to make an accusation without the least evidence to support it. He is therefore amenable to the bar of public opinion for carelessness and recklessness in statement which is nearly as bad as the coinage of a lie. Mr. Greeley was never in the tobacco business with Mr. Tweed or any other person. The charge is a lie out of whole cloth. Judge Hoadly owes it to his self-respect to make the amende honorable to those he has sought to mislead."

We have made some inquiry to see what the facts are and where the lie is, and whether it is made out of Greeley cloth. Fortunately, owing to a double litigation in which the Tobacco Manufacturers' Association has been involved, the facts are the subject of judicial proof. Mr. Greeley not only signed the certificate of incorporation with Tweed and Sands, and became and acted as a trustee, but he subscribed for $5,000 of its stock. Indeed, more than one of the stockholders has assured us that they became such largely upon the faith of Mr. Greeley's name and influence, supposing that he was investing his money with them, and had a like interest with them. Since they have learned that though Mr. Greeley put down his name for $5,000 of the stock, he never paid a cent for it, and never intended to pay, they are somewhat indignant, and do not estimate very highly his qualities for the Presidency. One of the stockholders, in a letter before us, writes:

"It was largely on the strength of his subscription that I and many others subscribed and paid in our money for the stock at par, while Greeley never paid a penny for his stock, and, it seems, never intended to. Nothing but the fortunate occurrence of the Reform movement ever saved the Company from the clutches of Greeley and the Ring."

The Company was got up largely through one Charles C. Yeaton, who derived his influence chiefly from the fact that he was a pet of Greeley's. After the Company got well under way, and its elegant quarters in Warren-street had been fitted up with the comfortable chair for Mr. Greeley to sleep in, Mr. Yeaton began to make claims upon the Company which they could not recognize. They then bethought themselves to inquire what manner of man Mr. Greeley's friend Yeaton was. They soon found that he stood recorded on the judicial records of the State as a boarding-house swindler who contracted debts on false pretenses, who had been an inmate of Ludlow-street Jail, and whose character was shown by numerous affidavits to be utterly worthless. After a time the officers of the Company heard rumors that some proceedings were to be taken against the Company, through the Ring Attorney-General, and that Mr. Tweed was in the scheme. They therefore took the precaution of applying at the Attorney-General's office, in Albany, and were informed that nothing of the kind had been done. Immediately after this they were astonished to receive papers on an action commenced by the Attorney-General, entitled "The People on the relation of Albert S. Yeaton (a brother of Charles C. Yeaton) against the Tobacco Manufacturers' Association and certain individual directors," with a notice of a motion to be made before Judge Cardozo for the appointment of a receiver. This combination of names—Tweed as mover, Cardozo as Judge, and E. R. Meade, W. O. Bartlett, and Gratz Nathan as attorneys—showed them that they were in the hands of the Philistines. Without following minutely the chronology, it is sufficient to say that it soon appeared that, in the language of the Deputy Attorney-General, the action had been commenced at the request of "Mr. Tweed and friends." Mr. Tweed, too, was reported to have been one of the bondsmen. It was also reported that Mr. Greeley was another, but as, when examination was made, no bond whatever could be found, this report may be, so far as Mr. Greeley is concerned, untrue. The action was brought by Yeaton, as a stockholder and creditor, and was founded on the allegation that a certificate had been filed that the capital stock had all been paid up in cash, when in fact it had been in part issued for the purchase of patents. Prior to the commencement of the action Mr. Tweed and Mr. Greeley are alleged to have assigned their stock to Yeaton; and Mr. Tweed gave Yeaton a letter to the Attorney-General, desiring that the suit be commenced. The Company, confident that, under the circumstances, they would not get justice before Cordozo, set to work while delaying the hearing and decision of the motion for a receiver, to placate Mr. Tweed, whom they supposed at that time to be the only "power behind the throne" in the case. They first gave a retainer to a lawyer who, it was supposed, could influence Cardozo, and then paid $350 to a friend of Tweed's to procure them the inestimable privilege of an interview with "the Boss." As the result of this interview, they arranged to buy Tweed's stock, and paid him par and interest, amounting to something over $11,000. They then took from him a letter to Yeaton to deliver the stock, and another to the Attorney-General, requesting that his (Tweed's) name should be taken off the bond. They supposed that they had practically got rid of the suit. They, however, knew that Mr. Greeley was a friend of Yea-

ton's, and thought it best to see him. Arming themselves with the judicial proofs of Yeaton's character, several of the trustees procured an interview with Mr. Greeley. What then occurred we state in the sworn language of one of the witnesses, taken in the litigation to which we have referred:

"We accordingly met with the directors and had a long interview with Mr. Greeley; and on the part of Mr. Charles C. Yeaton, his friend, Mr. Greeley said to us in substance that we should get rid of this suit by settling with Yeaton, to which it was replied that the Company knew of no claim that Mr. Yeaton had, or preferred or claimed to have, against the Company. It was also said that Mr. Yeaton would at that time be a difficult man to find, as there were orders of arrest out for him, and in the course of the conversation Mr. Greeley said, 'I could find him within half an hour.' Well, the directors refused to pay Yeaton anything for the purpose of having this suit stopped—didn't recognize any justice in the claim. Mr. Greeley left, saying he was sorry that we were going to have a litigation.

It was understood the stock of Mr. Tweed and Mr. Greeley had been assigned to Mr. Yeaton. I think there is no question but that at the interview with Mr. Greeley, at which a number of the directors were present, he was championing the cause of Yeaton. He said he could stop that litigation if we could settle with Yeaton, and he could produce Yeaton within half an hour. In that interview with Mr. Greeley he said he wanted the Company to settle with Yeaton. We asked him what he wanted to settle. He didn't state anything specifically to the directors. Yeaton put forward no claims against the Company that we knew of. I speak of Chas. C. Yeaton. Mr. Greeley said that the Company had cheated Yeaton badly. * * When Mr. Greeley talked about settling with Mr. Yeaton he would not go into details. He was asked to state what Yeaton's claims were. * * * Mr. Meade did not, I think, at any time name any reasonable sum for which Yeaton would retire from the case. He did name a sum. I went down to see Mr. Meade; went down at the request of some of the directors. He mentioned taking Yeaton's stock, $2,500 worth, at par; Greeley's $5,000, and payment of counsel fees to Mr. Bartlett and Mr. Courtney, and I think at the first interview he spoke of some further settlement with Yeaton. He had some claims, or fancied certain contracts, certain liabilities for which he attempted to hold the Company."

It is well to note here the shrewdness of the game that was being played. Mr. Greeley had not the effrontery to propose that his fellow-directors should pay him $5,000 for the stock which he had managed to get gratuitously, but he told them they must arrange with Yeaton. Yeaton's lawyer, Meade, tells them to pay Greeley.

Mr. Greeley was right, for the litigation went on, and within a week after they had refused to pay Meade the Company learned that Judge Cardozo, after having held the motion for a receiver under advisement for nearly three months, had suddenly granted it. The Company, however, had "another string to its bow." Nathaniel Sands' relations with the Ring had enabled him to get an anchor to the windward. He at first set to work to get a favorable decision, and failing in that, to secure a promise from Judge Barnard, that if Cardozo granted the motion for a receiver he, Barnard, would at once grant a stay. How this promise was obtained and carried out is best stated in the language of one of the witnesses referred to. The witness says: "It did not seem necessary in these consultations with Mr. Sands, for some time, to do anything. He spoke so confidently of a favorable decision, and he instructed me not to do anything. He had been informed, he told me, that Judge Cardozo would decide the case in our favor. He told me that Mr. Connolly—Richard B. Connolly—had informed him so, stating that he had seen Judge Cardozo and had a talk with him on this subject." Another witness testifying to the period after Judge Cardozo had granted the motion for a receiver says, "I went over and saw Mr. Sands, and he asked me what should be done; I told him that the proper course was to get a stay. I went over to the office and prepared the papers for a stay, and came back to Mr. Sands' office, and he told me that Judge Barnard was coming in there presently. Judge Barnard came in; the order appointing the receiver hadn't been entered at that time, and Mr. Sands told me when the order was entered that Judge Barnard would probably grant a stay, and when the order was entered I went and saw Judge Barnard, and he granted the stay." While the stay was being obtained the Company barred its doors to prevent the receiver from getting into possession. Knowing that Francis M. Bixby was the receiver, they rightly concluded that Gratz Nathan—the same Gratz whom the Tribune has been so ostentatiously, and, as it now appears, so hypocritically abusing—would be his counsel, and they served upon him the papers issued by Judge Barnard.

It would probably have been, even then, possible for Mr. Greeley to succeed, and to force the Company to pay the unjust claims of his friend Yeaton, and to buy his five thousand dollars of stock which he had subscribed for, but for which he had never paid one cent, had it not been that, just at this time, a letter from the Deputy Attorney-General fell into the hands of the counsel of the Company, armed with which they proceeded to seek an interview with Attorney-General Champlain, who was then running for re-election. Its contents were such that, in view of the reform sentiment then developed, the Ring Attorney-General was glad to give a stipulation discontinuing all proceedings against the Company—only exacting a proviso that the order to that effect should not be entered or made public till the day after the election. Mr. Greeley, therefore, like the negro who fell in the mud before the man whom he wrongly supposed to be Wesley, "dirtied himself for nothing," and the only result of the raid was that Tweed sold his stock, and that the Company was plunged into embarrassment, from which it has not yet fully extricated itself.

We do not desire to add one word to these facts, except to recapitulate them. It is shown that Greeley went into the tobacco manufacturing business with Tweed and Sands; that he pretended to subscribe for $5,000 of that stock, while in fact he was only a decoy; that he acted as trustee of the Company; that subsequently Tweed and he, separately, if not in concert, backed Yeaton in a scheme to wind up or black-mail the Company through the scoundrelly instrumentalities of the Ring Attorney-General, Judge Cardozo, Gratz Nathan, W. O. Bartlett, and others; that Greeley persevered in this after Yeaton's character was exposed to him, and the natural effect of the proceeding on the Company was shown, insisting that they must settle with Yeaton or they would have trouble, and that settling with Yeaton meant buying Greeley's stock, and that it was only a happy accident, and the strength of the reform movement, which prevented that trouble from being fatal to the Company.

In view of these facts, we suggest that the Cincinnati Enquirer owes an apology to Judge Hoadley; that the Professor of Journalism modify his denunciations as to the effect of a partnership with Tweed, and that honest voters reflect what sort of man is urged upon their support for President.

KERNAN AND DEPEW.

The New-York Herald Forsakes the Sinking Ship—A Reluctant Testimony to the Force of Public Sentiment.

From the New-York Herald, Sept. 7.

The important place at the head of the ticket, the Governorship, had long since been conceded to the Democracy, as the major part of what they would get in exchange for their support of the Cincinnati nominees. This was natural, as the strength of the "unterrified" was assured, while the New-York Liberals were among the shades of the "unknown quantities." But this rendering up of the first place on the fusion State ticket, if it recognized Democratic numbers, at the same time imposed a responsibility upon that party never apparently comprehended by them. This tribute to their power seems to have been accepted by them in the short-sighted spirit of an ordinary "divide" between traders; as something that, being their own property, they could do what they pleased with. This appearance of political myopy cannot be excused on the ground that the partition of the state was unexpected as far as regards the Governorship, for, whatever difficulty may have existed up to the last moment over the minor places on the ticket, that was conceded to them from the start. As if additionally to warn them of the necessity of an iron-clad nomination, the ticket made up by the Republicans at Utica with Gen. John A. Dix at its head was daily exhibiting its strength under their very eyes. They had, furthermore, to consider the fact that last year's overturning of the corrupt Tammany Ring in New-York City had lost the State to the Democracy, and a tyro in politics should know that possession is nine points out of ten in the possessor's favor. All this was lost upon them, and they set about their nomination as if they were building a party edifice without windows and with only a back door; they left no opening in front for any one outside of the Democracy to creep in, but just space enough to allow any one in the edifice to walk out. Such, in effect, is Thursday's nomination of Francis Kernan, of Utica, for Governor.

It is not our purpose to breathe a word against that cultivated gentleman's private character; but his record politically is that of an extreme Democrat, and, however fit to represent the coalition ticket of Baltimore and Cincinnati in a general sense, he is not calculated to attract a single Republican vote from the party led by Gen. Dix. Added to this record is the fact of the known strong religious views and the consequent danger citizens as deeply rooted in other creeds would apprehend from his elevation to the Gubernatorial chair. It may be lamentable that a question of religious opinion should weigh in a canvass; but that it does weigh cannot be denied. The principal danger feared in this direction, outside of the very stupid objection to his religion generally, is that the public-school system might suffer through his possible endorsation of sectarian appropriations. His friends already hasten to allay this latter "bogey;" but where so much apology is necessary, Republicans, with a strong State ticket of their own and a man after their own choosing at its head, will conclude to risk nothing by going over to their old political foe. What, however, is more to the point, is that this matter will tend to lose him as many votes in his own party as the best man they could name would be likely to draw from the opposition. It makes a very bad showing for the election in November, and we expect to see it thoroughly ventilated before many days.

Respecting the Lieutenant-Governorship, which was given to the Liberals after they had struggled unsuccessfully for the Congressman at large, the same myopic course was followed. * * * The nomination would appear to have been made rather in defiance of this popular feeling than in ignorance of it. It was "out and dried" in the first place, and bore traces of such handiwork as Senator Fenton, the master of the Convention, has been wont to exhibit. It was made on the calculations that the railways of the State would roll their serpentine coils around the voters and force them to the feet of the Liberal candidates. That an outcry sufficient to alarm all rural voters, Republican and Democrat, will be raised against this glaring plot we have no doubt. The election in the last year, if it did not achieve in the country what it did in the city, certainly prepared for the overthrow this year at the polls of all conspirators who pretend to the control of thousands of votes that can be used to promote the selfish ends of great corporations in the Legislature. Hence the nomination of Mr. Depew will be blindly opposed. It has not a trace of enthusiasm in it for Democrats anywhere, and will produce a feeling the very reverse in the friends of reliable government everywhere.

With these two names of Kernan and Depew as the net result of the combination conventions at Syracuse, we have no hesitation in saying that the failure of the Bourbons at Louisville is inconsiderable compared with it. * * It will damage the cause of Liberal Republicanism in New-York more than the loss of twenty Vermonts or Maines. They have in these nominations belittled their movement, and by a mixture of ignorance and recklessness paved the way for the success of the regular Republican State ticket in November, thus giving a great State to the Administration which they might possibly have secured for their own candidates to the Presidency.

WHENCE THIS CHANGE.

What the Democracy Thought of Chauncey M. Depew in 1865—Good Doctrine for Democratic Voters in 1872—Why This Extra Dose of Greeley Crow?

A HAPPY CHOICE.

New-York World, Sept. 6, 1872.

Chauncey M. Depew, the candidate for Lieutenant-Governor, is an excellent contribution to the ticket by the Liberal Republicans. He is a man of integrity, talents and character, (sic,) thoroughly conversant with State affairs, having been Secretary of State in President Lincoln's time.

And here is what the World thought of the Secretary of State "in President Lincoln's time." What changed its opinion?

THE CENSUS "JUST ONCE."

New-York World, Aug. 19, 1865.

There is an easy way for Mr. Depew to set himself right with the people of New-York. Let him accept Mr. Tweed's offer to have the census retaken in some of the disputed Wards by the Board of Supervisors. If the count proves correct we shall honestly own up our mistake; but if he declines to submit to this test, which was first proposed by the Tribune, at his inauguration, then we shall certainly not only hold him guilty of deliberate fraud upon the Metropolis, but will even believe that the Post and the Tribune were privy to it.

THE CENSUS OF BROOKLYN.

New-York World, Aug. 21, 1865.

The editors of the Tribune and Post would do well to put on their spectacles and read the figures we give elsewhere touching the census of Kings County. After having done so they will doubtless write another elaborate puff of Secretary Depew—his political probity, executive ability, &c. He will need a vast deal of puffing to keep himself and his swindling census from very general and very hearty contempt.

THE TRIBUNE AS A STATISTICIAN.

New-York World, Aug. 23, 1865.

* * * It is patent to every person with intelligence enough to be entitled to an opinion, that Secretary Depew's census is a bold, arrant cheat, intended to swindle this part of the State out of its due weight in the Legislature. The wriggling subterfuges of the Tribune only serve to make the fraud more apparent.

THE TRIBUNE AND THE CENSUS AGAIN.

New-York World, Aug. 30, 1865.

Mr. Depew, it must be remembered, is Secretary today by the purest accident; for, overwhelmingly beaten in the Republican State Convention, he became a candidate only when the gentleman selected declined to run. His nomination was effected in secret conclave of a dozen wire-pullers, and the party to which he belonged had no direct voice in the matter. Should his name be again presented to the people this census record will be enough to bring his career to an untimely end.

SECRETARY DEPEW'S CENSUS.

New-York World, Sept. 6, 1865.

* * * Depew tacitly acknowledges that his enumerators were a set of botches; but he pleads defects in the law. * * * Now, it is a rather curious circumstance that this singular law, which gives us worthless enumerators—no official responsibility—insures an abortive census, and which does not admit of correction, was drawn by Secretary Depew himself, and passed the last Legislature as it came from his office. We dare aim or any of his friends to deny this statement. * * * The inference is inevitable that the whole thing is a deliberate political swindle.

The italics are the World's.

New-York World, Sept. 7, 1865.

We only hope the Republicans will renominate this man for Secretary of State. If they do, we will show them that New-York City has as many Democratic voters as ever, notwithstanding the reported diminution of our population. * * There has been no carping or blustering about this matter, but a great deal of honest indignation among the people of all parties, which will manifest itself at the polls if the Republican Party dare put Mr. Depew up as a candidate for re-election this Fall.

THE CENSUS AND THE DICTIONARY.

New-York World, Sept. 11, 1865.

A correspondent suggests the following for the next edition of Webster's or Worcester's "unabridged:"

Depewism.—Definition: Any unexplainable depopulation of a town or village; sudden desertion of a neighborhood, as by means of cholera, without symptoms that can be detected; falling off of inhabitants in any locality.

Origin—In 1865, the time of the great census swindle. One Depew, whose name is now only known in connection with that census, was then a Secretary of the State of New-York.

THE OHIO DISASTER.

Some Further Particulars—List of Killed and Wounded—Suppression of the Details.

It proves very difficult to obtain accurate details respecting the railroad disaster at Independence, Ohio, on Thursday evening last, but it is shown that eight or ten passengers were killed and a very large number seriously injured.

The disaster was caused by a collision, which occurred about 7 o'clock in the evening, at the point named, on the Lake Erie Division of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, between an excursion-train returning from the State Fair at Mansfield and the regular express-train bound north. A telegram to the Chicago Post, sent from Mansfield, Friday, says:

"The railroad officials are very reticent, and the full extent of the accident will not be known until the Superintendent reports officially, or until some parties return who have gone to the scene of the disaster. The distance from here is eighteen miles, and trains have been interrupted until noon today, when the track was reported clear. So it is likely the whole story will soon be heard from passengers. A gentleman who visited the wreck last night says he saw eight dead bodies and at least seventy wounded persons, many of them seriously. The collision took place at the switch just north of Independence. The wrecked engine and trains are said to be a terrible sight, and as near as can be ascertained the collision was occasioned by a misconstruction or neglect of a telegraph order on the part of the conductor of the up-train, named Fitzpatrick."

THE KILLED AND WOUNDED.

The list of the killed and those seriously injured is published by the Sprugfield (Ohio) Advertiser, and is as follows:

Killed—Beach Harris, Louisville, Ohio; Jas. Shields, Hunt's Station, Onio; Chuzzleworth Scott, Mount Vernon, Ohio; Geo. Blystone, (boy,) and Eddy White, Independence, Ohio.

Wounded—Isaac Smith, Mount Vernon, Ohio; William Hatfield, Hartford, Ohio; Wm. Jasper and lady, Columbus, Ohio; Mr. Adams, Pulaskiville; Chas. Lee, Fredericktown; Jos. Auuget, Independence, Ohio; H. McClucken, Fredericktown, Ohio; Wm. Messech, Columbus, Ohio; Eliza D. Francis, Belleville, Ohio; Franklin McMorris, Centerville, Ohio; Charles Wise, Newark, Ohio; A. E. Penny, Newark, Ohio; Joseph Snyder, Pataskala, Ohio; Harry Martin, Mount Vernon; James Rowe, Locke, Ohio; Wakefield Ramsey, Independence, Ohio; Thomas Henderson, Lancaster, Ohio; J. S. Stout, Mount Vernon, Ohio; J. A. Adams, Zanesville, Ohio; L. N. Stump, Claypool, Ohio; Daniel Hatton, Zanesville, Ohio; Wm. McLaughlin, Louisville, Ohio; Wm. Lambert, Independence, Ohio; John Scully, Mount Vernon, Ohio; E. W. Randall, Mount Vernon, Ohio; Andrew McClellan, Independence, Ohio, and Robert B. Blackburn, Toledo, Ohio.

DEFENSE OF THE CONDUCTOR.

Some explanatory statements are made by the correspondent of the Cleveland Herald, who also writes from Mansfield under date of Friday, Sept. 6. He says: "Your correspondent has received from Drs. Mitchell and Keys, the surgeons who have this evening returned from the scene of the railroad disaster, information that up to the time of their leaving, 4 P. M., eight were dead and two more were dying as they left. Several cannot live. The wounded are nearly all dangerously injured, their legs and arms being broken. The story circulated here today that the accident was caused by the disobedience of orders by Conductor Patrick, and that he had fled to prevent his arrest, is false. The regular passing point of the trains was at Independence, and on Patrick's arrival there with his express-train north, he found the down excursion-train behind time, but a dispatch there waiting for him, saying that the track was clear to Belleville, and to run to that place. He and his engineer debated as to whether they would remain or obey the order and go on, and finally concluded to obey the order. He had not gone half a mile when the collision occurred. The express-train was a total wreck, and the cars of the down-train were jam the tracks each other. There were thirteen cars of the down-train, with over 900 passengers on board. Conductor Patrick is one of the most careful conductors on any road, and has run on this road for the past twenty-one years. He, as well as all others of the railroad office, was upon the ground all of last night and today caring for the dying and wounded."

MEXICO.

Destruction of the Hall of Congress in the Capital of the Republic.

From the Two Republics, Aug. 24.

Between 1 and 2 o'clock on Thursday a fire broke out in the Hall of Deputies, caused, as it is stated, by the carelessness of some carpenters who were at work upon the building. Prompt measures were immediately adopted for the removal of the ammunition, which was stored in great quantities near the locality of the fire. The engines were brought to the spot, but, from the inefficiency of the men who worked them, and the insufficiency of the necessary arrangements, could not be brought into use for an hour after their arrival. Soldiers were sent from the different garrisons, who immediately commenced the removal of the archives of Congress, and of some of the offices. The Minister of Fomento, the engineers Vera and Beltran, and many of the Deputies, also a large number of citizens, hastened to the spot and assisted in arresting the devouring element. The Congressional archives were saved, but everything else was destroyed, including the magnificent chancelier, which alone cost $10,000. The estimated loss is between $200,000 and $300,000. With all this loss, the country is benefitted by the removal of a standing reproach on republican institutions, and the character of Mexico as a republican country. We refer to the circumstance that, in the fury of the fiery king, the hall of the people's representatives has been removed from within the walls of the Executive Palace. It should never have been in that locality; there was an incongruability in the fact which struck with surprise, every Republican upon sight. The genius of Republicanism prompts a wide separation between the Executive and Legislative Departments, to insure independent action. In Mexico we have witnessed with feelings of mortification, Congress deliberating within the precincts of the Executive Palace, while it is garrisoned with troops, and its doorways and corridors are guarded by military (dragoons;) and every member in approaching his seat as a representative of the people was compelled to pass between a file of bayonets. This we witnessed with mortification; to us it looked like a burlesque on free institutions; and we entertain the fondest hopes that since Mexico has so handsomely wheeled into line with her sister republics, that this sight will never be witnessed again. Thanks to the vengeance of the fiery king, Congress Hall has been extinguished from among the features of the olden time. The respectable body that were wont to legislate under the frowning visage of the god of war, will have to deliberate elsewhere, and it is to be hoped that ere their next session is completed they will adopt measures for the erection of a Congressional Building, separate and distinct from the Executive Palace and its garrisons. The jealous Republicans at Washington have required their Executive and Legislative departments to be a mile apart.

Franking and Free Tribunes.

From the Times of Yesterday.

The Greelevite organ the other day laid down the law about the franking privilege after this fashion: "Senators and Representatives are prohibited by law from sending any free matter through the mails, except their own correspondence, the proceedings and debates in Congress, and public documents printed by order of Congress." Therefore, it was argued, all parties to the franking of matter not coming under any of the above designations "are concerned in a conspiracy to swindle the Government." So much for theory. We showed the other day how far the practice sanctioned by the Tribune falls short of this. We reprinted a circular signed by A. K. McClure, which was being scattered broadcast over Pennsylvania, and which accompanied copies of the Weekly Tribune, which were being gratuitously circulated over that State. The circulars are unquestionably sent out under the frank of Sam. J. Randall, for we have received from correspondents envelopes in which they were inclosed, bearing the real, not forged signature of the Representative from the First Congressional District of Pennsylvania. Of this fact the Tribune was perfectly aware, and this is the way in which it affects to meet our accusation: "Not a copy of the Tribune has ever been sent from this office under the frank of Mr. Randall." We never said there had, nor for that matter, that the circulars had been sent from the Tribune office either. But the latter, at least, have been franked by thousands in Philadelphia, with the full knowledge and consent of the Tribune. What are we to think, then, of the sneaking disingenuousness of a paper that first snivels over what it calls "a conspiracy to swindle the Government," at the very moment when it is engaged in aiding and abetting precisely similar practices, and which, after being confronted with proofs of its hypocrisy, grounds its defense on a quibble as contemptible as its original affectation of virtue?

DEDICATORY SERVICES.

Rev. Dr. Scudder's Iron Church in Brooklyn—An Immense Congregation—Sermon Last Evening by Rev. Dr. Taylor, of New-York.

The new Central Congregational Church, Brooklyn, was opened for public worship yesterday. In the evening there was an interesting dedicatory service, in which the pastor, Rev. Henry Martyn Scudder, Rev. Dr. Wm. Taylor, of the Broadway Tabernacle; Rev. Drs. Waterbury, Budington and Hutchins, of Brooklyn; Rev. Wm. H. Scudder, D. D., of Vellore, India; Rev. Joseph Scudder, D. D., of Glenham, N. Y.; and Father Gleason took part. Long before the exercises began, over 3,000 people assembled within the building, and about a thousand gathered outside unable to obtain admission. Rev. Dr. Taylor preached the sermon, taking his text from the eighteenth chapter of Matthew, twentieth verse: "For where two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst of them."

Good men, said the preacher, in all ages, have been drawn together in the enjoyment of each other's company. So thoroughly does the social element enter into Christian life that Christ not only recognizes the naturalness—the propriety of gathering together, but pronounces upon the act a special benediction. There was here, then, the divine charter of social worship. There were some things, it was plain, which were not essential to public worship. The place of meeting, so far as the higher needs of the worshiper were concerned, was of small importance; at the same time it was convenient and decorous that one should be had. Let his hearers beware of supposing that by such services as they were then holding there was imparted to the meeting-place any peculiar sanctity. The building in which they had assembled would be no more sacked after the services than were their daily dwellings. It was only a devout heart that could consecrate anything, and so serve God alike in the shop, the dwelling-house and the special house of prayer. He felt sure that in these modern days there was not needed so much the consecration of churches as of our exchanges, our City streets, our places of business. It was only a relic of the old papacy to consecrate the places where their dead were buried; but it was the grand prerogative of the Christian faith to consecrate the places where their lives were spent. The great essential to public worship was that those who engaged in it should assemble together in the name of Christ, who would strengthen them in every difficulty and support them in every trial. Dr. Taylor continued at considerable length, illustrating his subject at intervals, and bringing home the thoughts arising from the text to the present day and to his audience in a most forcible manner. The formal dedication of the church was then read by the pastor. In the morning he preached his farewell sermon in the old church on Ormond-place, which still belongs to the Central Congregational Church.

The new church is a very ornate structure of iron, built on Spencer-place, between Franklin and Bedford avenues, near Fulton. It cost $65,000—with the furniture and land, $100,000; is 150 feet front by 100 feet in depth, and will seat 2,500 persons. On the right of the front is the main tower, 110 feet in height, surmounted by a pinnacle bearing a golden star. At the tower base is the entrance to the right hall, from which three doors lead to the auditorium. In the centre of the front there is a handsome stained-glass window, below which, and approached by a tiled portico, are the three central entrances. At the extreme left of the building rises another tower, about one-half the height of that on the right, and which three entrances also lead to the auditorium. The roof is surmounted by a fine cupola. On entering, the ceiling is found to be of a blue color, barred with carved moldings in white and ornamented in gold. The side walls are of rose gray. The form of the room is semi-circular, the pulpit, a kind of wrought-iron affair, standing at the base. Seats and tables for reporters are stationed in front of the reading-desk.

CENTRAL PARK ON SUNDAY.

Yesterday was what the vulgar call a sweltering hot day. The sun, which had been of late somewhat shorn of its bright beams, came out in all his pristine strength, and made the good folks of Gotham pant again. It was evident to every one from an early hour that the day was going to be a trying one. So two courses were plainly open to the people—either to stay at home and palliate the dreadful heat by such mild appliances as fans, ice, darkened rooms and the TIMES, or to take heart of grace and flee to regions where the prevailing temperature was modified by local causes. Of those who selected the latter, the Central Park was the chosen spot of refuge for vast numbers who came there at three well-defined epochs. There were some who came very early in the morning, relying on the restaurants for their meals, and breakfasting in delightful style at Mount St. Vincent. Then there were others, mostly families who came later in the forenoon, and who were well provided with baskets full of provender, being on pleasure bent, yet of a frugal mind. After them there was a hiatus or breathing time, until about 2 o'clock, when the young people of the turtle-dove order came to woo under the pleasant green trees, and the servants, having served master and missus their dinner, came to enjoy their Sunday out, and the cheap swells, in imitation fine linen and tawdry purple, came to promenade, like third-rate peacocks, on the Mall. This was when the rush came, and it lasted without intermission until the shades of evening began to gather, and the yellow moon stole coyly into the sky. Then there came a fourth crowd of idiots who had sweltered all day in their houses, and then determined to enjoy the delicious coolness of sundown in the Park.

Could the present authorities have visited the scene yesterday afternoon, at the time of the greatest heat, and have seen the thousands who lay prostrate on the green sward, moving their arms in lazy enjoyment over the cool blades of grass, they would have realized how much happiness a little generous common sense can bestow. There are thousands of children who are growing up to bless Sunday because of its delightful associations in the Central Park. The swings have been unlocked for the juveniles, and for a small fee they can be lords and masters of the merry go-rounders. And it is a pleasure passing sweet to these who have counseled such liberty on the Sabbath, that flowers have not been plucked, and that trees have neither been climbed nor broken. The temptation to pluck flowers is not so great as it was, for the flowers have faded almost everywhere. But the Autumn has brought queer pods and strange seeds, and bright berries, all of which are tantalizing to boys. The cultapas have great pods, like Brobdingnagian French beans, and the Spanish chestnuts have prickly husks, inclosing edible treasures dear to the boyish heart. But these are respected. So the queer seeds and the berries are not plucked, and hang there to remind the observant eye that the bright Summer days are gone, and that the locks of the year are beginning to be streaked with silver. Here and there one can detect a white strand now. Next month those locks will be completely gray, and then in the next they may be whitened with the falling snow. So passes the splendors of the year.

Letter of Condolence from Mr. Seward to the Family of President Juarez.

Ex-Gov. Seward has addressed the following letter to Don Delfin Sanchez, son-in-law of the late President Juarez:

AUBURN, Aug. 20, 1872.

MY DEAR MR. SANCHEZ—Mr. Frederick Seward and his wife, as well as myself, have been hoping daily for your arrival with Mrs. Sanchez; but I can no longer defer the duty of expressing to her and yourself my condolence in the great bereavement you have sustained. It has been a source of much satisfaction to me that in every circle abroad, as well as in my own country, I was able, with the advantages of personal acquaintance, to bear my testimony to the virtues and genius of your father. It is always sad to part with the great and good whom we love. But sometimes we are mitigated when we have the assurance that they have fulfilled in ample measure their duty to their family, their country and to mankind. Such was the case with both of your eminent and beloved parents. I hope you will do me the favor to make my sympathies known to the members of your family residing in Mexico.

Very sincerely your friend,

WM. H. SEWARD.

William Kelly, twenty-one years old, of No. 350 East Twenty-first-street, was attacked by an unknown rough at the corner of Nineteenth-street and Second-avenue and stabbed in the arm.

THE WEATHER.

Synopsis and Probabilities.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 9—1 A. M.—The barometer continues highest over the South Atlantic and Gulf States, where clear weather has prevailed, except Florida, whence areas of rain have been reported; clear weather has continued from Massachusetts to Virginia, Tennessee and Kentucky; cloudy weather and areas of rain have prevailed from Maine westward, over the lower lake region and thence to Missouri and Nebraska.

The temperature has fallen from Vermont to Northern Ohio and Michigan, and thence to the Upper Mississippi.

PROBABILITIES.

Southerly to westerly winds for the Southern States east of the Mississippi, with clear weather except along the Gulf coast, where southerly to easterly winds, cloudy weather, and areas of rain are probable. Generally clear weather during the day from Virginia to south-eastern New-York, with winds gradually shifting to southerly and easterly; westerly to northerly winds and clear and clearing weather for New-England; easterly to southerly winds, cloudy weather and areas of rain for the lower lake region, and thence to Missouri and the north-west. The midnight telegraphic reports from Florida, Texas and Upper Michigan to the lower Missouri Valley are still missing.

The Weather Yesterday—Great Heat as Compared With Last Year.

The sudden and remarkable changes in the temperature during the past two weeks, from tropical heat to chilling coolness, and now again from the low temperature of seventy-five to the high nineties, must put a severe strain on the constitution of the average New-Yorker. He is pretty well inured to extremes of climate, and endures with equal equanimity or denounces with impartial irritation the exhausting heats of Summer and the polar cold of Winter. But it is rarely that both extremes are precipitated upon us within so brief a period as a fortnight. The crowds of Summer travelers who hurried back to the City, believing that the "dog-days" were over, probably regretted yesterday that they had returned in such haste, and panted again for cooling breezes. Along the streets every house which boasted blinds appeared with them tightly closed; the hack horses in front of the hotels kept up a constant stamping, as the swarms of flies, revived by the quickening heat, teased and bit them; the shady side of the road was sought by pedestrians. The average temperature yesterday was 83½°, as compared with 65¾° for the corresponding day of last year. At 6 in the morning the mercury, as shown by Hudnut's thermometer, marked 74°, at nine it reached 79°, and at noon it was 87°. Between this hour and half past three, the mercury rose ten degrees; it fell to 91° by 6 P. M., and at 9 o'clock had sunk to 85°. The highest point marked on the same day last year was 74°, so that it was 23° warmer yesterday than on the 8th of last September.

Schultz and Walker's observations show that up-town the temperature was slightly cooler, as follows:

	7 A. M.	12 M.	3 P. M.	6 P. M.
Degrees Fahrenheit	75	88	91	83
Stand of bar. in inch.	29.93	29.93	..	29.92
Hygrometer at noon, 71.

WASHINGTON NOTES.

Preparations for the Winter Work—Repairs to the Executive Mansion and the Capitol—Documents.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—It is expected that the President and his family will resume their residence at the Executive mansion about the 20th inst. For a month past repairs have been progressing in that building and other arrangements made to add to the comfort of the occupants. By that time it is supposed the absent heads of the Departments will also have returned. Meantime the officials in charge are collecting data for the usual annual reports to Congress. Repairs are going on at the Capitol, both on the Senate and House sides. The furniture has been varnished and the paint-brush is in active exercise, preliminary to the replacing of the carpets and other Winter arrangements.

CAMPAIGN AMMUNITION.

The political committees occupy rooms and passage-ways in the basement of both wings.

Many men and boys are at work, the latter folding and the former addressing documents, both day and night. At least 100,000 of them are sent away daily, especially to the States most in dispute, and carts and wagons are in constant requisition to take the packages to the railroad cars. The printers in this city are kept busy working for the respective parties.

REVIEW OF THE PAST WEEK'S BUSINESS.

Of suburban lots but one sale was held, that being by Jere. Johnson, Jr., on Tuesday last, Sept. 3, at Ocean Point, Long Island, when ninety-six plots of land, containing about 350 City lots, were sold for an aggregate of $40,000.

EXTENSION RAILWAY

First Mortgage 7 Per Cent. Convertible

GOLD BONDS,

AT 90 AND INTEREST,

Issued by the Indianapolis, Bloomington and Western Railway to aid in building its EXTENSION line West, in a direct line from Champaign (185 miles) to the Mississippi River at Keokuk, and a branch from White Heath (32 miles) to Decatur, all in the State of Illinois. The bonds are secured by a first and only mortgage on the EXTENSION, now being rapidly constructed in the most thorough manner by able and experienced contractors who represent a capital of several millions of dollars, which insures the last rail being laid at an early date. About 60 miles are already finished and 110 miles graded; the whole line, 217 miles, will be completed early in 1873. We have been connected and entirely familiar with the I., B. & W. Railway from its early organization. It was completed in the Autumn of 1870, and has developed rapidly into a SUCCESSFUL AND WEALTHY CORPORATION, having a large revenue from its largely increasing business. With the EXTENSION it will be one corporation, with 420 miles of road, located in a commanding position in the heart of the best portion of the country. The counties on the line of the EXTENSION in 1870 had a population of 242,330; valuation of real and personal estate, $181,000,000; bushels of grain raised, 27,000,000; value of farm products, $25,570,000, and live stock, $18,349,000; to which may safely be added 15 per cent. to represent the present population and value. THE COUNTIES ON THE OLD LINE AND THE EXTENSION TOGETHER CONTAIN A POPULATION OF NEARLY THREE-QUARTERS OF A MILLION, AND A PROPERTY VALUATION EXCEEDING $400,000,000.

From these statistics it will be readily seen that the EXTENSION will have a Local Business that will make it a complete success. In addition to this it will have the entire Through Traffic of the Missouri, Iowa, and Nebraska Road, connecting with it on the Mississippi River, and extending West to the Missouri, 300 miles, where it connects with the Midland Pacific in Nebraska. These two corporations, and also the Peoria and Rock Island (91 miles,) and the Davenport and St. Paul (300 miles,) although separate corporations, ARE CONTROLLED IN THE INTEREST OF THE INDIANAPOLIS, BLOOMINGTON AND WESTERN RAILWAY, and, practically, will be a united line of more than 1,200 miles, the through business of which will pass over the I., B. & W. This is an East and West trunk route and has no parallel competing line. The Eastern connections at Indianapolis are the Pennsylvania Central, Baltimore and Ohio, Bellefontaine, Lake Shore, and New-York Central, and other roads centering at this point. From the Sea-board to the West and North-west distances are materially reduced via this system of roads; so much so that it cannot fail to be the popular line for travel and business. Liberal subscriptions to the stock were made by towns and counties on the line of the EXTENSION, and the remainder has been taken by experienced railroad men and Eastern capitalists.

These facts cannot fail to make the bonds, which will be issued only on completed road, take high rank among the best railway securities.

The bonds are $1,000 each, convertible into stock at par, at the option of the holder, and may be registered free of charge.

Coupons, payable January and July 1, free of tax. The bonds may now be had from banks and bankers throughout the country.

We offer them at present at 90 and interest, and recommend them strongly to our friends and investors as one of the safest and most desirable securities on the market.

Bonds delivered free of express charges. Maps, pamphlets and circulars furnished on application.

THE

CHICAGO AND CANADA SOUTHERN

First Mortgage Sinking Fund 30 Years

SEVEN PER CENT. GOLD BONDS

Interest Payable April and October at the Union Trust Company,

AT 90 AND ACCRUED INTEREST.

This road is the Western link in the new AIR LINE from BUFFALO to CHICAGO and runs from the Detroit River to Chicago in nearly a straight line.

The road is a part of the same line as the Canada Southern and is being built by the same men, viz.: Milton Courtright, John F. Tracy, David Dows, Wm. L. Scott, Henry Farnam, R. A. Forsyth, Jno. M. Burke, M. L. Sykes, Jr., all Directors either in the Chicago and North-west or the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific; George Opdyke, of the Midland Road; Sidney Dillon, Daniel Drew, John Ross, David Stewart, Samuel J. Tilden, Kenyon Cox, and other prominent railroad men.

The Road, like the Canada Southern, will have steel rails (60 pounds to the yard) throughout; is practically straight and level; much shorter, and can be run with greater speed and safety than any other road connecting with Buffalo and Chicago.

Twenty-five miles are finished and running; seventy-five miles more are so far advanced as to be finished by Jan. 1; and the entire road will be completed during the ensuing year. Steel rails and ties for one-half the entire road have already been purchased.

The builders of the road control enough of its Chicago feeders to obtain for it a profitable business from the start, having projected the line to accommodate existing business, and having seen the necessity for another trunk line between Chicago and the Atlantic sea-board, located expressly with the view of obtaining the cheapest transportation practicable.

The branch lines will make the shortest connections between Chicago and Toledo, and Chicago and Detroit, as well as between all these points and Buffalo.

The Canada Southern Bonds, in every particular like these, were eagerly taken, the last of them several weeks ago, by the best class of investors, and were on the market a shorter time than any other railroad loan of like amount for years past.

The proceeds of these bonds will complete the entire line, and we recommend them with the same confidence as we did the Canada Southern, and regard them as in every way a choice security.

7 Per Cent. Gold Bonds,

HAVING 50 YEARS TO RUN, PRINCIPAL AND INTEREST PAYABLE IN UNITED STATES GOLD COIN, "not inferior to the present standard." Interest payable semi-annually in New-York, on the 1st day of June and December, and guaranteed jointly and severally by

The Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton Railroad Company,

The Pennsylvania Company, and

The Grand Rapids and Indiana Railroad Company.

The road is entirely completed and in operation, and extends from Fort Wayne, Indiana, to Richmond, 90 miles in the State of Indiana, and connects the Pittsburg, Fort Wayne, and Chicago Railway, the Grand Rapids and Indiana Railroad, and the whole system of roads under the control of the Pennsylvania Company in Indiana and Michigan, with the Cincinnati, Hamilton, and Dayton Railroad to Cincinnati and Southern Ohio and Indiana. The road is leased for 99 years to the Grand Rapids and Indiana Railroad Company, and operated by it for the joint account of the guarantors, and by a contract entered into between the Grand Rapids and Indiana Railroad Company, for the Pennsylvania Company, lessees of the Pittsburg, Fort Wayne, and Chicago Railway, and the Cincinnati, Hamilton, and Dayton Railroad Company, reciprocal interchange of business; all these Companies agree to throw all their freight and passenger traffic which may be appropriately done over this road, thus insuring it, from the outset, a large volume of business. The holders of these Bonds are thus trebly secured:

First—By a first mortgage on a finished road now in full operation.

Secondly—By a contract for interchange of business with three prosperous and powerful corporations, controlling in its favor a vast amount of business.

Thirdly—By the direct and absolute guarantee, jointly and severally, by INDORSEMENT ON THE BONDS by the above-mentioned three Companies.

The whole issue of the Bonds is $1,800,000, or $20,000 per mile, and but a limited amount are now offered to investors, Price, 92 1-2 and interest. Circulars and information furnished by

TWENTY PER CENT. INVESTMENT.

THE AMERICAN BRIDGE CO.,

OF CHICAGO, ILL.,

L. B. BOOMER, of Chicago, President.

(ORGANIZED AUG. 1, 1870.)

AUTHORIZED CAPITAL STOCK, $1,000,000.

The Subscription Books will Positively Close Oct. 1, 1872.

The whole amount of the authorized Capital Stock of this Company not having been issued, the balance will be issued to subscribers at par, payments for same to be made in four installments of 25 per cent. each, viz.:

Twenty-five per cent. July 15, 25 per cent. Aug. 1, 25 per cent. Sept. 1, and 25 per cent. Oct. 1, 1872. Part time installments to be paid with interest at the time of subscription,

Books now open at the office of the undersigned will be positively closed at 3 P. M., Oct. 1, 1872.

The total amount of bills paid or issued at this time is $414,700, and on this basis the Company shows a present surplus of $136,280 97, and is now doing a flourishing business. Over 1,000 men are almost constantly employed in their extensive works, and they now have on hand $2,500,000 of work for various railroads in the United States, among which may be mentioned the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific, Lake Shore and Michigan Southern, Chicago and Northwestern, Missouri, Kansas and Texas, Michigan Central, Missouri Pacific, &c., &c.,) and the net profit on this work alone will be over $400,000. The Company will in now offered work to the amount of more than $6,000,000, including some of the largest bridges ever built in this country; to accept of which and further business necessitates a larger working capital, as the amounts of material have to be kept constantly on hand, and the Company are frequently obliged to receive in part payment for their work railroad and other bonds, which are perfectly good securities, but not always immediately marketable.

The THIRTY ACRES of land in Chicago belonging to the Company, and on which their extensive machine and other shops are situated, is now worth nearly $300,000, and prominent real estate dealers say it will be worth in six years, at least $1,000,000—an amount equal to the whole proposed capital.

The career of the AMERICAN BRIDGE COMPANY, though brief, has already fully demonstrated the profitableness of the enterprise. The Company has constructed since its organization, and up to the last of December, 1871, a total of 38,177 feet of bridges, 18 turning-tables and 16 iron roofs, and pneumatic and screw pile substructures, costing $3,400,000, and have facilities for the construction of pneumatic piles surpassed by any Company in the country, and a capacity for the construction of at least 150 feet of bridges for every working day in the year.

The iron railroad and highway bridge at Leavenworth, of three spans of 340 feet each, and the Union Pacific Bridge across the Missouri River, of eleven spans of 250 feet each, were constructed by this Company.

The net profit arising from this business, as shown by the books of the Company, up to the 31st of March, 1872, was the sum of $373,482 14, or at the rate of $224,089 28 per annum, or 50 per cent. upon the capital stock then outstanding. With the proposed new structures, machinery, &c., the Company will have much greater capacity, and the proceeds of the increased issue of stock will enable them to buy material for cash, thereby making a saving of from $50,000 to $75,000 per year.

The Company can undoubtedly, on above basis, make dividends of from 20 to 25 per cent. per annum on the full amount of capital, $1,000,000, with a fair prospect of a considerable increase.

The undersigned are prepared to give to those inquiring the fullest details and entire satisfaction regarding the reliability of the Company's statements, and the unquestioned integrity and ability of its officers.

We confidently commend to capitalists the above as an investment worthy their attention.

INDIANA.

Review of the Situation in the Hoosier State.

The Party Candidates at the October Election—Changing Prospects—The Struggle for Victory—A Glance at the Congressional Districts.

From Our Special Correspondent.

INDIANAPOLIS, Saturday, Sept. 7, 1872.

When making an extended tour of political observation for the TIMES last Spring, I could write hopefully almost every where. Even Missouri gave signs of promise, but when I got into Indiana I could see nothing cheering. The State seemed stricken with political leprosy and was covered with foul patches of Democracy and Republican disaffection. The Greeley craze was just coming upon the country, and the Hoosier State was showing symptoms of the disease more decided than any of her neighbors. John D. Defrees had been of use to the Republican Party as an adroit working politician, and he had gone over to the enemy as a consequence of losing his place as public printer. George W. Julian had long been a power because of his unflinching anti-slavery record, and soured by his failure to obtain the recognition he thought he deserved, he too had clasped hands with life-long political foes. These two men were types of a defection that then threatened to be serious, and in addition the Republicans were by the ears in several of the counties about such trivial matters as the location or price of a bridge or a public building, and there was no telling how these quarrels would end. On the other hand, the Democrats were then compact and emboldened by Republican dissensions were hopeful and defiant. Altogether, the political outlook was sufficiently dismal.

SEEKING REDEMPTION.

But even then there was evidence that the State might be saved. As early as the 22d of February, the Republican State Convention, which met in this city, furnished proof that Republicanism in the State was not dead, and, as a first means of resurrection, nominated the following excellent ticket:

For Governor—Thomas M. Browne, of Randolph County.
For Lieutenant-Governor—Leonidas Sexton, of Rush County.
For Congressmen at Large—Godlove S. Orth, of Tippecanoe County; William Williams, of Kosclusko County.
For Secretary of State—William W. Curry, of Vigo County.
For Auditor of State—James A. Wildman, of Howard County.
For Treasurer of State—John B. Glover, of Lawrence County.
For Reporter of Supreme Court—James B. Black, of Marion County.
For Clerk of Supreme Court—Charles Scholl, of Clark County.
For Superintendent of Public Instruction—Benj. Wilson Smith, of Marion County.
For Attorney-General—James C. Denny, of Knox County.

But at that time a vastly more important, work even than this was done in the selection of an admirable State Central Committee, with Col. John W. Foster, of Evansville, as its Chairman. An excellent State ticket would be but an aggravation without efficient organization of the voters who would support it, and in Col. Foster the Republican Party of Indiana found a Moses to lead it out of the bondage of Democratic supremacy. In saying this it is not meant to derogate the just claims of such leaders as Senator O. P. Morton; but he, engrossed then and for months afterward by his public duties in the Senate, could not spare the time to do that party drudgery which was absolutely essential and to which Col. Foster exclusively devoted himself. Immediately after the State Convention he began a tour of the State, making himself familiar with the condition of the party in every county, changing party leaders where necessary for efficiency, compromising local difficulties wherever practical, so that by the time the Cincinnati Convention met he had the party in reasonably good shape again. If he had not done so it is not too much to say that the first wild wave of Greeleyism which swept over the land would have shattered the Republican Party of Indiana beyond the possibility of reconstruction. As it was, its condition was for a time precarious, but Col. Foster had saved more than enough to reform it as compact and as powerful as ever.

THE DESPERATE SITUATION.

While this was being done the Democrats were not idle. They had helped by all the means in their power the Republican schism, and when Julian and his followers went off to Cincinnati they had applauded more heartily than was discreet. After the Cincinnati nominations the Democrats were dazed for a time. There was a vast deal of Bourbonism among them, and Voorhees thought he had spoken the sentiments of his constituents when he denounced Greeley with so much fierceness. So he did; but after a time the other Democratic leaders succumbed to the wiles of Fenton, and presently found themselves with appetites so keen set for "boiled crow" that they went off to Baltimore to help secure a plentiful supply for the empty Democratic stomach. That being done, Voorhees, who alone had made himself prominent in opposition, sat down with them to the nauseous dish, and the Democrats of Indiana were apparently united in support of the Sage. But before this event they had put their State ticket in the field on the 12th of June, and it was composed in the main of unobjectionable material, personally, as follows:

For Governor—Thomas A. Hendricks.
For Lieutenant-Governor—John R. Cravens.
For Congressmen at Large—Michael C. Kerr, John S. Williams.
For Secretary of State—Owen M. Eddy.
For Audstor—John B. Stoll.
For Treasurer—James B. Ryan.
For Superintendent of Public Instruction—Milton B. Hopkins.
For Attorney General—Bayless W. Hanna.
For Clerk of Supreme Court—Edward Price.
For Reporter of Supreme Court—John C. Robinson.

Thus it will be seen, while in other States the combatants were hardly yet organizing, here they were arrayed in line of battle and ready to enter upon the conflict. Every probability of success seemed with the Democrats. Indiana has always been a close State, and since the war entirely too close to be counted as sure for either side in any contest. In the October election of 1868 Gov. Conrad Baker had a majority of only 961 in a total vote of 342,189, while in the Presidential election in the next month Gen. Grant had a majority of 9,572 in a vote of 343,532. These figures were doubly suggestive, because they showed that while the total vote in November was only 1,343 more than in October, the Republican majority was 8,611 more. The actual Republican strength, therefore, was the vote of Baker rather than that of Grant, and proof of this fact was further furnished in the State election of 1870, when the Democrats had a majority of 2,558 in a vote of 317,-560. That year the Republican vote was 157,501, against 171,575 for Baker in 1868, while the Democrats had 160,059, against 170,614 cast for Hendricks in 1868. The Republican decrease in 1870, then, was 14,074 and the Democratic 9,555, the difference being 4,519, or only 1,961 more than their majority. These comparisons showing that the State had been steadily drifting away from the Republicans, and that the Democrats already had a preponderance, it was plain that the comparatively large majority for Gen. Grant was anomalous enough to make it doubtful if it could ever be repeated. In addition, the Democrats entered upon this campaign with fortuitous strength. A party long in power is always liable to formidable attack, and the Republican had been attacked through its own recalcitrants in Congress with a venom which had never been equaled. It was absurd to suppose that this furor of investigation had deceived men of the experience of Julian, but it was impossible to say how many of the rank and file it had made distrustful. Beyond all this, however, was the nomination of Greeley at Cincinnati, drawing off to him many Republicans, and afterward at Baltimore, giving to him, as it was supposed, the solid Democratic vote. If there should be only a couple of thousand of these Greeley Republicans, it was plain that unless this defection could be made up somewhere, we were in desperate straits. But it was well known that there were many more than two thousand, and the Democrats, relying upon their party discipline to bring up their own voters in solid phalanx to the support of the regular nominee, began the fight with every prospect of success, so that it is not singular they boasted in the outset of fifteen thousand majority in October, nor that they now claim ten thousand with airy confidence.

THE CHANGING PROSPECTS.

Any one less hopeful and energetic than such men as Senator Morton and Col. Foster would have been dismayed by an outlook such as this, and have allowed the State to go by default while they labored to save two or three Congressional districts from the general wreck. But, convinced that all that was necessary to retrieve the situation was the enlightenment of the people, work was resolutely begun, Gen. Tom Browne, of Randolph, the Republican candidate for Governor, is not only one of the most popular men in the State, but also one of the most powerful public speakers in the country, and taking the stump as early as May, he speedily discovered that the Republican disaffection was not so solid that it would not in great part melt away before the heat of argument. As time went on, and the canvass became more vigorous, the prospects for the Republicans steadily brightened. The Republicans discovered in Greeley only a false friend who was leading them by a foul by-path into the Democratic camp, and the Democrats found in him one whom the leaders might readily follow by an underground mine into the Government citadel, but whom the body of their party could not be trusted to support in this nefarious business. While these changes in public sentiment were going on, but hardly suspected by the Democrats, both parties stood in great part at parade rest. There were a few speeches made on each side, but it was not until nearly the middle of July that active hostilities were commenced. By that time all the nominations for Congress had been made; each side had numerous speakers in the field, and the attention of the people became then, as it has since continued, almost entirely engrossed by the pending political issues. On the Republican side the chief speakers at first were Senator Morton and Gen. Browne, each of whom has labored constantly, Browne having spoken seventy times, and in fifty of the ninety-two counties of the State. Morton entering upon the canvass later, has been in fewer counties, and thus far has spoken but forty times, but as he has got into the habit lately, of speaking twice each day, he will outstrip Browne if his voice holds out.

THE STRUGGLE FOR VICTORY.

The labors of these two apostles were but preliminary to the grand onslaught upon the lines they had already weakened. Col. Foster, sitting in his dingy room, in this city, organized and has directed with consummate energy and tact a political campaign rarely equaled for intensity and vigor. Thoroughly informed of the weak points of his enemy, he has pounded at them remorselessly. The State has been flooded with documents, showing the real points at issue, and everywhere the work of enlightenment and organization has been carried forward without pause. Grant clubs are formed in every town, meetings are appointed for every county, torchlight processions are of nightly occurrence, and today Indiana blazes through her length and breadth with the fervor of her Republicanism, which has been made thus powerful and aggressive by proper leadership. Chief among the agencies used to kindle this enthusiasm has been the eminent public speakers whom Foster has kept busily at work portraying the iniquity of the coalition which is striving to sneak into power. Among these speakers has been Senator Wilson, whose stay, made brief by his engagements in Maine, was a triumphal progress, and who was met everywhere by meetings which have never been surpassed in Indiana for numbers and enthusiasm; Gov. Oglesby, of Illinois, "glorious Dick," has spoken also to vast crowds, and wherever he has been has awakened intense disgust for the unholy alliance by his fierce denunciations of the plain trickery that underlies it. Hon. E. A. Storrs, of Chicago, has delivered some of those cogent argumentative addresses for which he is remarkable. Gov. E. F. Noyes, of Ohio; Gov. Lucius Fairchild, of Wisconsin, and Senator John A. Logan, of Illinois, are now engaged in the State, and are delivering masterly speeches to immense assemblages. In addition to all these, and not inferior to them, are the many home speakers; for Indiana is one of the most prolific of the States in this respect. Among these speakers, in addition to Senator Morton and Gen. Browne, are Senator Pratt, Hon. Wm. Williams, Hon. Godlove S. Orth, Hon. John Coburn, Hon. J. P. C. Shanks, Hon. J. N. Wilson, Gen. M. C. Hunter, Hon. T. J. Cason, Hon. H. B. Saylor, Hon. W. W. Herod, Hon. J. N. Tyner and Hon. Jasper Packard, candidates for Congress; Gen. Nathan Kimball, Gen. Wm. Grose, Hon. Will. Cumback, Gen. James C. Veatch, Hon. W. W. Curry, Gen. Ben. H. Harrison, Hon. Edward H. Green, Capt. James H. White, Hon. Chas. Scholl, Col. R. P. Dehart, Col. James B. Black, James S. Hinton, (colored candidate for Contingent Elector,) Hon. Jonathan W. Gordon, Hon. Delena W. Williamson, Hon. Leonidas Sexton, and Hon. R. W. Thompson. Engagements are already made for most of these gentlemen up to election day, and they will be aided in the future by Gen. Joseph R. Hawley, of Connecticut; Hon. James G. Blaine, of Maine; Hon. B. F. Butler, and Hon. George S. Boutwell, of Massachusetts; Hon. John Sherman and Hon. John A. Bingham, of Ohio; Hon. Matt H. Carpenter, of Wisconsin; Gen. Franz Sigel, Gen. Stewart L. Woodford and Fred. Douglass, of New-York; Senator Ferry, of Michigan, and Gen. James A. Hall, of Maine, with perhaps many other distinguished gentlemen, whom Col. Foster has invited to come to his aid, but from whom definite replies have not yet been received. It will be seen, however, that from the list given a campaign is in progress that must be vigorous to employ so many speakers, and it is, in fact, unparalleled in the history of the Hoosier State.

But on the other hand, the Democrats have not been, are not, and do not promise to be idle. They have already brought their heaviest guns from abroad to bear upon the Republican ranks, as Schurz and Trumbull have spoken their pieces at all desirable points, the former having spoken at every place where there is a large German population. The voice of Doolittle has not been heard in the land, probably because he has been preceded by lithographic copies of his Conatty correspondence, nor have I learned that the Democrats are sufficiently enamored of the dreary platitudes of Parson Tipton to import them here. These four constituting the whole Liberal Republican oratorical stock, and one being permanently disabled, while another is not desirable, the whole labor really falls upon Schurz and Trumbull, except what aid they may get from such secondary soreheads as Hon. S. W. Moulton and Gustavus Koerner, of Illinois, and Hon. Geo. W. Julian, of Indiana. The Democratic speakers thus far announced are all of home production, consisting of Hon. Thomas A. Hendricks, Hon. D. W. Voorhees, Hon. M. C. Kerr, Hon. W. S. Holman, Hon. W. E. Niblack, Col. John S. Williams, Hon. John R. Cravens, Hon. John B. Stoll, Col. James Gavin, C. F. McNutt, Esq., Hon. F. D. Lemon, Hon. J. B. Ryan, Hon. John Sarnighausen, Hon. B. B. Daily, Gen. M. C. Hascall, Gen. M. D. Manson, and Hon. John R. Coffroth. These, with a few local soreheads, constitute the oratorical force of the Democracy, and it must be admitted they are working with superhuman energy for men who announce that they have an easy victory by ten thousand majority.

THE PRESENT PROSPECT.

Coming now to take a general view of the field, for the sake of space I take up the State by Congressional Districts rather than by counties.

First District.—This benighted region has been represented by Hon. Wm. E. Niblack, Democrat, for the past twelve years, and only once in the history of the State did it elect an Anti-Democratic representative. In 1870 Niblack had 2,250 majority, and I suppose the district is safe for him again, although Wm. Heilman, the Republican candidate, professes to be able to carry it. He is a German, a man of wealth and great influence, who is making a thorough house-to-house canvass, during which he is meeting with great encouragement. But, upon the whole I can see no good reason for the fight which has overtaken Niblack, as his election seems sure, although by a reduced majority.

The Second District is the one so long represented by Hon. M. C. Kerr, and is hopelessly Democratic, their majority in 1870 being 5,634. The present candidate, Mr. Wolfe, obtained his nomination because of his fierce hostility to Greeley, but accepting the Sage after the Baltimore sale, he has outraged the Bourbon element, which is quite large. In Jackson County, in this district, Jason B. Brown, the Democratic State Senator, who holds, has come out for Grant, because of his Greeley disgust, and Dr. Sherrod, another of the most prominent Democrats in the district, has openly espoused the Louisville movement. There is little Greeleyism among the Republicans, and from these various causes it is expected that the Democratic majority will be very materially reduced.

The Third District gave Hon. W. S. Holman, Democrat, present Representative and candidate for re-election, 2,424 majority in 1870, and he will probably be returned again by something like the same figure. There is some Liberalism in Jennings and Jefferson Counties, but, on the other hand, so much Bourbonism in the Democratic counties that the Republicans expect to make more than compensating gains, and somewhat reduce the adverse majority. The Fourth District, represented for several years by Julian, has been going to the dogs of late. Hon. J. M. Wilson, Republican, being returned in 1870 by only four votes. It is now somewhat tinctured with Liberalism, especially in Wayne County, where our majority will be reduced some two hundred. On the other hand, there is a great deal of Bourbonism in Shelby, a strong Democratic county, and this is relied upon to overbalance Republican defection. A careful survey of the district shows that Wilson is reasonably certain of an election by about five hundred majority.

The Fifth District returned Gen. John Coburn, Republican, in 1870, by 416 majority, and is expected to do better now. In Hendricks and Morgan Counties there have been some local quarrels among the Republicans, which has culminated in Liberalism. But here, as everywhere else, there is a counterpoise, the Bourbon element being very strong in Johnston and Putnam. In Johnston the Democratic candidate refused to support Greeley, whereupon he was ousted, and another nominated in his stead. The first nominee then came out as an independent candidate, and, being supported by the Republicans, will be elected. This trouble alone more than offsets all the Liberalism in the district, and Gen. Coburn has a prospect of an increased majority.

The Sixth District, long represented by Voorhees, to whom it gave 1,425 majority in 1870, has heretofore been hopelessly Democratic, but there are now strong hopes that it will be redeemed, and that Voorhees hastened to his late meal of "boiled crow" without reward. In no part of Indiana is Bourbonism so prevalent as here, especially in Sullivan and Owen, the latter having a straight Democratic ticket in the field. In Green, Clay, Lawrence, Monroe and Vigo the prospect is equally bright, and, to say the least, Gen. M. C. Hunter, the Republican candidate, has at least an equal show with his opponent.

The Seventh or Lafayette District, which returned Gen. M. D. Manson, Democrat, in 1870, by 393 votes, is the one which the Republicans claim they will certainly redeem. There has been considerable trouble in the district, but the nomination of Judge T. J. Cason has reconciled all Republican differences, and his election is regarded as certain. There is little Liberalism in the district, a few of the leaders having gone off in Boone, Benton and Tippecanoe Counties, but, as it has proved, without taking any one with them.

The Eighth District gave Hon. James N. Tyner, Republican, who is a candidate for re-election, 1,964 majority in 1870. It has considerable Liberalism in it now, especially in Hamilton and Cass Counties, most of which originated in old local quarrels which have so afflicted and crippled the Republicans of Indiana. But, per contra again, it so happens that the Eighth has a good share of Bourbonism, and especially in Madison. The Republicans have also made gains in Miami County by the establishment of a large manufactory at Peru, and upon the whole, Tyner's majority will be reduced but little if any.

The Ninth District is close, having given Gen. J. P. C. Shanks, Republican, only 394 majority in 1870; but it is thought reasonably sure for him now, in spite of the fact that Delaware is the stronghold of Liberalism in the State, and the Republican majority there will be largely reduced. The Greeleyites claim they will carry the county, but that is one of their absurd boasts, as our majority will be at least one thousand. There is some Liberalism in other counties, but there is also a great deal of Bourbonism in Wells, Allen and Blackford, so upon the whole Shanks will pull through, although he could have been beaten had his opponents put a stronger man against him.

The Tenth District is also afflicted with Liberalism in Elkhart and Noble, but it is dying out, as evidenced in the town of Goshen, in Elkhart, there were sometime ago seventy-two Greeley Republicans, and now not half that number. The district is rapidly improving, and Hon. H. B. Saylor, Republican, will be elected by a majority of 2,300 over that of 1870.

The Eleventh District gave Hon. Jasper Packard, Republican, 1,407 majority in 1870. This year there was a struggle for the nomination, which was secured by Packard, whereupon the defeated candidate took himself and some of his followers over to Greeley, but most of the latter have come back. There is also considerable Liberalism at La Porte and Michigan City, and while the district is certain for Packard it is expected the Republican majority will be reduced.

NOTES.

I have thus presented, as briefly as possible, a view of the present political condition of the State. It is, upon the whole, encouraging, and if space and the mosquitoes would allow, I might append many facts of general interest, which would show the causes which are at work for the gradual regeneration of the State. As these must be reserved, I will only add that, while the Democrats are confident of ten thousand majority, the Republicans claim at least fifteen hundred, and they are much nearer the truth than their opponents. As it looks today, the State is reasonably sure to go Republican, but whoever goes to betting on a large majority will forcibly illustrate the proverb that a fool and his money are soon parted. E. The Allgemeine Saengerbund—Twenty-third Annual Meeting.

The societies of the New-York Allgemeine Saengerbund held their twenty-third annual meeting at the Germania Assembly Rooms yesterday. The receipts during the past year amounted to $3,462 67. The expenses were $2,975 40—leaving a balance of $487 27. The assets amount to $1,215 59.

The singing-school established by the Saengerbund for the education of vocalists was attended by 380 pupils—191 boys and 189 girls.

The Allgemeine Saengerbund is composed at present of fifteen vocal societies, numbering over 500 members. The following officers were elected: President, Wm. Keyl, of the Theodor Koerner Leiderkranz; Vice-Presidents, Mr. Enrich, of the Marschner Maennerchor; Corresponding Secretary, Lorenz Wohlhagen, of the Uhland Bund; Recording Secretary, Alexander Flor, of the Rothmaenner Leidertafel; Finance Secretary, Phillip Sehen, of the Theodor Koerner Leiderkranz; Control Secretary, Peter Mueller, of the Germania; Treasurer, Casper F. Breidbach.

A Greeley Highwayman.

Michael O'Brien, a boatman nominally, residing at No. 15 James-slip, who is Vice-President of the Fourth Ward Greeley and Brown Association, was arraigned at the Tombs charged with highway robbery. The complainant, Alex. Clark, of No. 36 Cherry-street, deposed that about 2½ o'clock on Saturday night, at the corner of James-slip and South-street, O'Brien snatched his silver watch, valued at $25, from his pocket. He pursued and caught him, handing him over to Officer Murphy. Alderman Coman held O'Brien for trial.

THE POOR CHILDREN'S FUND.

Close of the Movement—Amount of Work Performed—Receipts and Expenditures.

The operations of the Children's Fund closed on Saturday last. We today present a brief statement of the receipts and expenditures to date, reserving the final and detailed statement until Wednesday, there being a few small bills remaining yet unpaid.

There were eighteen excursions given, on which were taken 18,672 children and 1,723 adults, two-thirds of the latter being parents in charge of infants. The total expense of these excursions was $10,608 63, or a pro rata expense of fifty-two cents for each individual. In the East-side Relief District, 33,650 families were visited, 734 of whom received food supplies, 979 medical visits were paid to 302 children and 46 adults, 286 being restored to health; 2,919 children received food relief. In the West-side District, 10,089 visits were made; 239 families, or 1,077 individuals were assisted; and 256 medical visits made to sick children. In the Down-town District, 195 medical visits were made; 389 families, or 1,210 children and 141 adults were relieved. In the Up-town District, 22,738 visits were made, 1,929 cases relieved, and 554 medical visits made to children. The total expense for relief, so far, was $4,977 47. The amount expended for excursions and relief, to date, was $15,586 10, leaving a balance in hand of $6,680 30.

THE FALL RACES.

Programme for the Coming Meeting at Jerome Park—The Races and the Entries.

The butterflies of fashion are deserting the Summer resorts and flocking back to Gotham in vast numbers, to be in time for the great sporting and social event of the Fall season, the meeting of the American Jockey Club, at Jerome Park. When the deciduous leaves begin to strew the earth, and the golden hues of October gladden the eye, the echoes of hoofs will be heard through the woods and over the hills of Westchester. The programme, as furnished by the stewards, is full of promise, and there will be a grand rally from all parts of the country, and the speculators will fairly revel in opportunities for increasing the "golden store."

The meeting is announced for Wednesday, Oct. 2, on which day there will be six races. The first event is the Manhattan Handicap for all ages, a mile and a quarter, for which there are twenty entries. Following will come the Jerome Stakes, (late Champion Stakes,) for three-year olds, $100 each, half forfeit, with $1,500 added. There are sixty-one entries. In this stake, Daniels and Meteor will again try conclusions.

The third race will be for the Nursery Stakes between the two-year olds. The distance covers a mile. The stake is a valuable one, as there are fifty subscribers of $50 each, play or pay, and the Club adds $1,000. There are many high-bred horses entered, among them Count D'Orsey, Reviler, Springbok, which is now in the McDaniel's stable; Catesby, the remarkably fine Eclipse colt of Gov. Bowie's, which, in our opinion, would have won the Kentucky Stakes had not an accident robbed him of victory. There are some sons and daughters of Leamington in this stake, and if they are at the post at all fit they will create a disturbance. The fourth event of the day will be a private sweepstakes for four-year olds, $500 each, and $100 forfeit, four miles. This has nine subscribers, but probably not more than three will come to the post. A Handicap Steeple-chase, over the usual course, will bring the day's sport to a close. The entries for this are to close on the 28th of this month.

The second day of the meeting will come on Saturday, 5th, and will be opened with the race for the Hunter stakes, for three-year old fillies, a mile and three-quarters; $200 each, $50 forfeit, and $500 added. There are twenty-nine equine feminines; among them Experience Oaks, who will be a tough customer, should she be in the same condition as when she beat Buckden, Gray Planet, Piedmont and Mimi at Saratoga. The second event will be an interesting one, as it will be mile heats for a purse of $700. Mile-heat races are always popular with the masses, and we think it a short-sighted policy on the part of the Jockey Club, as caterer, not to furnish more frequently a dish so palatable to the public taste.

The third event will be the Maturity Stakes, for four-year olds, three miles; $200 each, half forfeit, and $1,200 added. This has twenty nominations, and among them several good ones. Harry Bassett is entered, also Monarchist and Ginger. Next comes the Champagne Stakes, for two-year olds, $100 each, half forfeit, with $500, three-quarters of a mile, winners at Long Branch, Jerome Park, and Saratoga to carry extra weights. This has ten entries, which were published in the TIMES on Monday last. A handicap hurdle race of a mile and three-quarters, over seven hurdles, will bring the day's work to a close.

Tuesday, Oct. 8, is the third day of the meeting, and there will be five events to be decided. The first is the Annual Sweepstakes for three-year olds, $800 entrance, $100 forfeit, and $1,000 added. There are thirty-five subscribers. The distance is two miles, and Meteor and Joe Daniels will again measure strides, with Alarm and other good ones, to give them a shaking up. The second event will be a purse for two-year olds, six furlongs; and then comes the Grand National Handicap, which has ten entries, the weights of which we gave last Monday. This will probably be one of the most brilliant races of the year, the distance of the racers two and a quarter miles. Preakness is in with 118 pounds; Monarchist, 112 pounds; Abdel Kooree, 110 pounds; and Allie Hunt, 115 pounds. The race lies between these four, the other six we do not consider in the race. Alroy might do something if brought before the starter in perfect order, and of Tubman we have seen enough to convince us that he is an arrant coward, and will not go a mile and a half at a good pace, much less two and a quarter. The fourth race will be a dash of a mile and three-quarters, and the concluding event will be a mile dash.

The fourth day will be taken up with purses. There will be a mile and a quarter for three-year olds; two miles and an eighth for all ages, with penalties for winners and allowances for beaten horses; a members' race of five furlongs, a mile and three-quarters, and a selling race of a mile and an eighth. The fifth and last day of the meeting will occur on Saturday, Oct. 12, and there will be a dash of three-quarters of a mile for two-year olds; a handicap of five furlongs for all ages; a handicap of a mile and five-eighths for all ages; a dash of four miles for all ages, and the curtain will fall on a scene of "grand and lofty tumbling," superinduced by the exertions of horses and jockeys endeavoring to consume the monotony of flat racing, and at the same time to inflame the desire of the ladies to witness break-neck acts on horseback.

THE FALL RACES.

Programme for the Coming Meeting at Jerome Park—The Races and the Entries.

The butterflies of fashion are deserting the Summer resorts and flocking back to Gotham in vast numbers, to be in time for the great sporting and social event of the Fall season, the meeting of the American Jockey Club, at Jerome Park. When the deciduous leaves begin to strew the earth, and the golden hues of October gladden the eye, the echoes of hoofs will be heard through the woods and over the hills of Westchester. The programme, as furnished by the stewards, is full of promise, and there will be a grand rally from all parts of the country, and the speculators will fairly revel in opportunities for increasing the "golden store."

The meeting is announced for Wednesday, Oct. 2, on which day there will be six races. The first event is the Manhattan Handicap for all ages, a mile and a quarter, for which there are twenty entries. Following will come the Jerome Stakes, (late Champion Stakes,) for three-year olds, $100 each, half forfeit, with $1,500 added. There are sixty-one entries. In this stake, Daniels and Meteor will again try conclusions.

The third race will be for the Nursery Stakes between the two-year olds. The distance covers a mile. The stake is a valuable one, as there are fifty subscribers of $50 each, play or pay, and the Club adds $1,000. There are many high-bred horses entered, among them Count D'Orsey, Reviler, Springbok, which is now in the McDaniel's stable; Catesby, the remarkably fine Eclipse colt of Gov. Bowie's, which, in our opinion, would have won the Kentucky Stakes had not an accident robbed him of victory. There are some sons and daughters of Leamington in this stake, and if they are at the post at all fit they will create a disturbance. The fourth event of the day will be a private sweepstakes for four-year olds, $500 each, and $100 forfeit, four miles. This has nine subscribers, but probably not more than three will come to the post. A Handicap Steeple-chase, over the usual course, will bring the day's sport to a close. The entries for this are to close on the 28th of this month.

NOTES.

The Louisiana Jockey Club will hold its first Fall meeting at New-Orleans, on the 30th of November, continuing four days. There will be three races each day.

The footprints of Longfellow in his race with Bassett at Saratoga have been measured, and it was found that he ran forty-seven feet further than Harry, being on the outside most of the way, and finished a short length behind in a crippled condition. What a commentary this is on the superb courage of Longfellow.

The entries for the Fall meeting of the Fleetwood Park Association close at Johnson & Marshall's, corner Twenty-eighth-street and Broadway, on Monday next, 16th inst.

The principal topic of the week will be the match of $1,000, between Bradley and Charley Green, mile heats, best three in five, in harness, which is to take place this afternoon at Prospect Park Fair Grounds, if the weather proves fine. The betting is very even on the result and a stout contest is looked for.

Our suggestion to the Trotting Associations in regard to instituting the system of the Paris Mutual Pools has been favorably received among the members of the Prospect Park Fair Ground Association, and no doubt they will have them in operation next Spring.

The Eight-hour League of the Furniture Department is composed of the German United Cabinet-makers, numbering 1,500 members; the Wood-carvers' Union, 500 members, and the Upholsterers' Union, 350 members, making a total of 2,350.
